GERMANY MOVES TO STOP POLITICAL RIOTS

Mussolini Reorganizes Cabinet

Five Ministers and Eleven Under-secretaries Displaced in Shake-up Announced To-day

NEW BLOOD WITHOUT CHANGE OF POLICY

Five ministers and eleven under secretaries were displaced in the shake-up. Mussolini retained for himself two of the vacated portfolios.

These constituted the first changes in the cabinet since September, 1929.

The shake-up was regarded as another "rotation" to bring new blood into the government without any change of policy.

The five ministers who resigned were Grandi; Alfred Rocco, Minister of Justice; Antonio Mosconi, Minister of Finance; Prof. Balbino Guiliano, Minister of Education, and Guiseppe Bottai, Minister of Corporations.

Mussolini, who already was Minister of Interior as well as Premier, kept for himself the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Corporations.

COLORFUL FIGURE

Best known of all of them throughout the world is the dapper, young, black-bearded Signor Grandi, whose names has figured in most of the international affairs which played a part on the world stage during the last year.

Mussolini, who held the premiership and six ministries before the present cabinet was appointed in 1929, took back about half the power he had then with his rearrangement to-day. Besides assuming the Ministries of Foreign Affairs and Corporations, he took over all relations with the Vatican and all religious affairs, by detaching the department of cults from the Ministry of Justice and adding it to the Ministry of Interior under himself.

He appointed the following three new ministers: Pietro de Francisci, Minister of Justice; Guido Jung, Minister of Finance, and Francesco Ercole, Minister of Education. Signor de Francisci is rector of the University of Rome and Signor Ercole is rector of the University of Palermo.

The following new undersecretaries were appointed: Undersecretary to the Premier, Fulvio Suvich; foreign affairs, Antonio Albertini; justice, Umberto Puppini; finance, Alberto Asquila; corporations, Bruno Biagi; education, Arrigo Solimi; communications, Romano Ruggero, Gaetano Postiglione and Luigi Lojacono.

Oincenzo Casalini, who was undersecretary of finance, was appointed president of the National Institute of Exports. He was the only one of the sixteen resigned members of the cabinet to receive another post.

POST RECORD MADE TO-DAY

Letter Comes From London to Victoria in Seven Days on New Service

Shows Great Possibility For Development of Mail Route in East

London to Victoria in seven days. That is the new record established by the first letter carried on a new speedy fast boat-lane service between the two cities across the Western Hemisphere this week.

To-day, G. H. Gardiner, postmaster here, received a special communication from G. Herring, chief superintendent of the Canadian Post Office Department airmail service.

It was sent to announce the special service during the sessions of the Imperial Economic Conference in Ottawa. Reaching Victoria to-day, the letter lowered the former record of eight days by a complete day, and bettered the usual time for fast mail between the two cities by between three and four.

The message left London at 1.30 o'clock July 13, reached St. Hubert Airport, Montreal, on the afternoon of July 17. From there it was rushed by airmail, via Chicago to Seattle, arriving in the Sound City yesterday evening and coming across to the capital of British Columbia aboard the Iroquois this morning.

SERVICE EXPLAINED

The letter, explaining the service, from Mr. Herring to Mr. Gardiner, follows:

"I am sending you this letter from London by means of a combined fast steamer and air transport service, which the department is operating with the assistance of the Royal Canadian Air force and Naval Service, during the sessions of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa.

Fifteen Killed In Mexico When Car Telescoped

Associated Press

Mexico City, July 20.—Fifteen persons were killed and twenty or more were injured to-day when a train from Laredo struck a crowded street car in the suburb of Tacuba.

The street car service has been suspended for more than a month because of a strike, and was resumed only yesterday evening.

CITY OF EMPIRE DESTINY AND HOPES

Times Writer Finds Ottawa Basking In New-found Glory

Dominion's Capital on Eve of Imperial Conference Is Full of Optimism and Delegates; Private Cars Pile in on Railways and Social Secretaries Are Working Overtime

By ARCHIE WILLS

Staff Correspondent of The Victoria Daily Times

Ottawa, July 19—Ottawa is to-day basking in new-found glory, a glory which in the past has been associated only with great capitals of the Old World, but which in this day of wider internationalism is spreading to new climes.

Archie Wills

Captains of state assembled here on the eve of the Imperial Economic Conference hope that shifting the scene of the Empire gathering to a New World setting will result in a new spirit and motive, being furnished with the birth of something of real value to all parts of the commonwealth.

GREAT EXPECTATIONS

All delegates with the possible exception of the Irish Free State, radiated optimism. They all say freely something important will be accomplished and it is even rumored that much has been accomplished behind the scenes and that big surprises may be given to the public within the first week. Building up of trade by reduction of many tariffs, is freely discussed. The policy of every man for himself seems to have waned in its importance and the need of a more reasonable attitude in approaching subjects of discussion is recognized.

There may be plenty of doubting Thomases on the outside who wag their heads and say little good can come from the conference, but in Ottawa to-day there is optimism. Fifteen hundred political leaders, advisers, technical experts and clerks are here for the greatest economic show in his-

Magnificent Pageant To Open Conference

Stage Set at Ottawa For One of Most Momentuous Conclaves in History

By W. W. Murray, Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Ont., July 20.—Parliament Hill to-morrow will witness an ancient ceremonial enacted as an accompaniment to a totally unfamiliar function when all the observances ordinarily associated with the opening of Parliament will for once be tranferred to the inauguration of the Imperial Conference. Stalwart guardsmen, equipped to the last bootlace, gorgeously arrayed in scarlet and gold tunics, and the whole triumphantly crowned by towering bearskins, will be drawn up confronting the main block of the Parliament Buildings for the purpose of paying compliments to His Excellency the Governor-General.

SALUTE OF GUNS

Somewhere on the hill an artillery battery will be emplaced so that the arrival of the Earl of Bessborough may be heralded with the appropriate number of gunshots. Meanwhile, gaily-uniformed Dragoons, the sheen of their lances reflecting the sunlight and their plumes and pennons fluttering to the breeze, will escort the vice-regal party from Rideau Hall to the houses of Parliament.

With such a gallant pageant will the conference be formally opened.

The stage is set for one of the most momentous imperial conclaves in history. Momentous, as Rt. Hon. Stanley Baldwin indicated yesterday, because it meets at a time when the world is wandering in the wilderness of depression and despair. Despite the newness of it all, so far as Canada is con-

Evly Kalep, Esthonian Woman, to Share Controls

New York, July 20.—Roger W. Williams, transatlantic airman, will be accompanied by an Esthonian woman when he takes off about August 15 for Athens with the hope of creating a new world's distance record.

Miss Evly Kalep, only recognized Esthonian aviator of her sex, will share the controls, he said, when he leaves Floyd Bennett Field in an attempt to better the mark of 5,011 miles established by Russell Boardman and John Polando on a flight from New York to Istanbul. Miss Kalep, twenty-six, has flown for two years.

DAIL MUST BE SUMMONED

Free State Senate Blocks de Valera's Retaliation Efforts

Dublin, July 20. — By altering the government's emergency duty bill, the Free State senate to-day placed an obstacle in the way of Eamon de Valera's attempt to retaliate for the imposition of British tariffs on Irish goods with Free State tariffs on imports from Great Britain.

The duties imposed by Great Britain had been placed in effect as a means of collecting land annuities which the de Valera government refused to pay.

Under the subsequent Free State bill, which already has been adopted in the Dail, the government would have unlimited powers to lay down tariffs. The Dail is in recess, and the senate's action means that it will have to be specially summoned to deal with the alteration.

The alteration made by the senate consisted of deletion of a section empowering the executive council to impose a stamp duty on any document or transaction. Heated debate preceded the amendment. It is expected that the Dail will be summoned into session immediately to deal with the situation.

"Jafsie" Still Believes Case Will Be Solved

Bristol, Conn., July 20.—Dr. John F. Condon of the Bronx, New York, the "Jafsie" of the Lindbergh kidnapping, remains confident the case will be solved.

The $50,000 ransom money received by the kidnappers, he believes will lead eventually to their arrest. He said that until the money has been recovered, he will continue to hunt the men involved.

Plan To Bring Down City Budget In Fall

Council to Consider New Departure in Preparation of Estimates

Foresight in City's Finance Is Object of Budget Proposal

Redrafting of the city's financial routine under a new plan which would provide for bringing down a tentative budget during the fall instead of waiting until next spring is now contemplated, it was learned to-day in an announcement from Alderman P. R. Brown, chairman of the finance committee.

This proposal is in line with the policy outlined to the council by Mayor Leeming during preparation of estimates earlier in the year when he declared that the council should budget not only for 1932 but also for 1933.

Alderman Brown stated the plan would be to bring down a draft budget some time in October, which the council could consider, revise if necessary, and then adopt as a recommendation to the council of the following year.

"It is designed," he added, "as a policy of foresight, under which it may be possible to lay plans for a reduction of the tax rate in 1933. The budget, as far as we know now, has been properly balanced this year and our efforts at the present time are

Hummel, Aide To Thornton, Resigns Post

Montreal, July 20.—Announcement was made at the headquarters of the Canadian National Railways here to-day of the resignation of L. V. Hummel, principal assistant to the president of the system. Mr. Hummel's resignation was submitted and accepted at the meeting of the board of directors which received the resignation of Sir Henry Thornton.

After lengthy experience with the Pennsylvania and Long Island railroads, Mr. Hummel joined the Canadian National in January, 1923, as office assistant to the president. In December of that year he became assistant chief of transportation of the C.N.R. system, a post which he held until October, 1924, when he was made assistant to the president. He was advanced to the office of principal assistant to the president in March, 1930.

Esquimalt Liberals To Name Delegates

Members of the Esquimalt Liberal Association will hold a special meeting in the Parish Hall Friday evening to select delegates for the provincial convention at Luxton on August 2, it was announced by F. J. Mesher, president of the municipal organization to-day.

Thirty-seven will be selected to attend the convention during the meeting in the Parish Hall, which will start at 8 o'clock.

DOLLAR WHEAT IS AGAIN CRY

North Dakota Farmers Pledge to Hold Grain For New Level

Agreed Price Will Be Based on Winnipeg Quotations

Tolna, N.D., July 20.—Across the prairies of North Dakota, expected to produce one-sixth of the United States wheat output this year, is heard a chorus—"Hold the grain for one dollar a bushel." If sponsors are successful the cry will be taken up throughout the United States.

Dell Willis, Tolna farmer, is chairman of the organization which has stirred the farmers in more than 400 North Dakota townships to pledge holding their wheat, effective August 1, unless and until the dollar level is reached.

"This period of low prices finally has brought us to a position where it is either sink or swim," Willis said.

"We will hold our wheat until there is a demand for it at the set price of one dollar per bushel, and then we will sell only 10 per cent of it one month," Willis continued. "This will make an orderly marketing system."

He said the plan, launched here less than a week ago, has been enthusiastically received.

The agreed price will be based on Winnipeg quotations, which yesterday ranged from 53⅞ to 58 cents per bushel. The dollar will be for the best wheat, with discount for lower grades.

LONDON HOLDS GREAT HOPES

Belief That Canada Prepared to Make Substantial Concessions

Canadian Press Cable

London, July 20.—The special correspondent at the Imperial Economic Conference for the free-trade Manchester Guardian reports an optimistic feeling resulting from the belief that Canada is prepared to make "substantial concessions."

Until a few weeks ago the conference prospects were not deemed bright in Canada, The Guardian's correspondent said, "because it seemed impossible the Bennett Government could forsake its Canada-first tariff policy. Lately a feeling has been gaining ground that substantial concessions by Canada are possible."

Several of the leading British correspondents report it is evident the proposal for a quota for empire wheat in the British market is already dead." They refer to Manitoba official statements questioning the value of the quota policy.

The Liberal News-Chronicle carries the comment from Ottawa that "it is amusing and instructive to note how eagerly the delegates are already putting in the shop window the special needs of their own country. It is evidently expected of the dear old British lion to shake a benevolent paw and offer many propitiatory gifts."

$20,000 FIRE AT CRESCENT BEACH

Canadian Press

Crescent, July 20.—A spectacular fire here at midnight Tuesday destroyed three residences and a dance hall. It originated in the kitchen of the dance hall, across the street from the Crescent Beach Hotel, which was saved by quick action of the management. The buildings destroyed are a dance hall operated and owned by Frank Woods, and the residences of J. W. Shellshear, Main Street, Vancouver George Reifel, Marine Drive, Vancouver, and Mrs. C. E. Lewis, Agnes Street, New Westminster, occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Spick, London Street, New Westminster.

The damage, mostly covered by insurance, is estimated at $20,000. Mr. Reifel places his loss at $10,000, and Mr. Woods estimates his at $3,500.

The dance hall was an up-to-date building, to which the finishing touches were just being put. Mr. Woods stated that he will build again immediately.

GAS EXTENSION MAKES ADVANCE

Contract Changes Asked By Municipalities Approved By Gas Company Officials

Further progress was made this morning towards extension of the gas mains of the Victoria Gas Company into nearby municipalities, at a cost of more than $100,000. The reeves of Oak Bay, Esquimalt and Saanich interviewed officials of the company and secured consent to a number of minor changes in the verbiage of the agreement submitted by the company.

In the absence of A. T. Goward, president, S. J. Halls and Atwell D. King studied the suggested changes and agreed they would be accepted. The most important was inclusion of provision that meter rentals shall be the same as those effective in Victoria, this matter having been inadvertently omitted from the draft agreement first submitted.

Arrangements were made for each municipality to sign the revised agreements as soon as they are forwarded by Mr. Goward, who is expected back from a vacation in two or three days. If necessary special sessions of the respective councils will be held to expedite inception of the large amount of organization work which must precede laying of the mains.

RIOTING TAKES TOLL IN LIVES

Associated Press

Berlin, July 20 (Associated Press)—The entire Prussian cabinet was removed from office by the government of the Reich tonight and state secretaries were appointed as deputy federal commissioners to replace the ousted ministers.

Associated Press

Berlin, July 20.—The German government, with old-time military precision, moved swiftly this morning to establish a virtual dictatorship over the huge state of Prussia and to clamp down martial law on the city of Berlin and the province of Brandenburg.

The first action was taken under an emergency decree issued by President Paul von Hindenburg this morning. It followed critical pressure upon the government to stop the political riots which have taken a toll of more than 100 dead and 1,200 injured in the last three weeks.

Chancellor Franz von Papen was appointed commissioner of Prussia, and Lord Mayor Franz Bracht of Essen was named the chancellor's assistant and given the dictatorial power, in von Papen's name.

TENSE SITUATION

Three additional deaths and many injuries in continued political rioting added to the tenseness of the situation.

A Nazi was killed at Hanover by a Communist while giving the Nazi salute. A Reichsbannerman was shot dead at Bauer-Erle and a woman who was injured in Sunday's riot at Altona died, bringing the death total in that battle to sixteen.

Early in the afternoon the Prussian Ministry of State in the Wilhelmstrasse was occupied by soldiers. The president of the police, the vice-president and the commander resigned.

Immediately thereafter the Prussian cabinet announced it had appealed to the state supreme court to declare the emergency decree null and void on the grounds that there was no emergency requiring such action and that in reality the decree "has other purposes." The cabinet asked that the court issue a temporary injunction preventing ex-

As a measure toward restoring world trade, some expression of willingness to join with other nations in tariff revision should come out of the Ottawa conference, it is believed by the government of this province, which further suggests that an invitation be given for such an international conference at an early date.

Thirty-eight agriculturists from England, Scotland, the Irish Free State and South Africa, who arrived in Victoria on the afternoon boat to-day in the course of a Dominion tour, were welcomed at the dock by Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Acting Minister of Agriculture, and taken to Government House for afternoon tea.

It is expected that during their two and a half day stay in Victoria the farmers will go around a good deal on their own. It is expected, however, that the itinerary will include trips to the Dominion Experimental Farm at Bazan Bay, Butchart's Gardens and to farms in the Saanich peninsula.

The western tour is being directed by J. M. McKay, general agricultural agent for the Canadian Pacific Railway. D. Crawford, M.B.E., J.P., Herts, is unofficial tour leader, and Arthur Canham,

Five Awards Come To This Province

Boatswain Mate of 'Restorer' Rescued Boy From Drowning Here

Canadian Press

Hamilton, July 20.—Nine bronze medals have been awarded by the Royal Canadian Humane Association for heroic deeds, it was announced to-day, five of them going to British Columbia, three to Ontario and one to New Brunswick.

The Pacific Coast recipients are William Francis of Victoria, H. A. Gagne of Quathiaski Cove, Wilfred Dale of East Kensington, and Iva G. Mervyn and Raymond Mervyn of Cloverdale. In Ontario, Eli Turonski of St. Catharines, Samuel Lowe of Toronto and William Rogers of Norwood receive the prized recognition of valor, while the New Brunswick award goes to Horace Graham of Richibucto.

In addition the association announces the distribution of a score of parchment certificates.

With the exception of two cases, all the awards are for rescues or attempted rescues of persons from drowning. One of the bronze medals, however, for Horace Graham of Richibucto, is awarded for his part in aiding a companion injured in a hunting accident, while a parchment certificate for Irving Small of Moose Jaw recognizes his action in saving two men from attack by an infuriated cow moose.

BRONZE MEDALS

Eli Turonski, Marjory Avenue, St. Catharines, Ont., for his heroic action in the rescue of Hugh Albert Davis, from drowning in Barnesdale Pond, St. Catharines, March 12, 1932. Davis, while skating on the pond, fell through the ice and was in the water seven or eight minutes before he was finally rescued in an unconscious condition. Turonski dove into the icy water fully clothed and wearing his skates, and succeeded in rescuing the Davis boy.

Horace Graham, New Brunswick, for his heroic action in saving the life of Jos. Robichaud, October 13, 1931. Graham and Robichaud were hunting on Richibucto Bay. Mr. Robichaud was in the shooting box and Mr. Graham exchanged places with him. Robichaud had gotten into the boat and Graham was in the box and bent over, about to load his gun, when he was startled by a report and the sound of a charge of shot going over his head. Jumping to his feet he saw the boat which had drifted off some distance with Robichaud standing apparently dazed in the stern, his left arm streaming with blood. Without a moment's hesitation, Graham plunged into the icy water up to his waist and clambered aboard, ripped the sleeve from the injured arm and found most of the forearm was blown away, and that Robichaud was fast bleeding to death. Mr. Graham tied Mr. Robichaud's arm as tightly as he could, both above and below the elbow, and then made all haste to the shore and help, seven or eight miles.

William Francis, Victoria, B.C., for his heroic action in the rescue of a young boy from drowning at Rithet's pier, B.C., November 29, 1930. Mr. Francis is boatswain mate of the Cs. Restorer. He heard cries for help coming from the water alongside the pier, and noticed a small lad struggling in the water. He went down the dock piling, which was covered with barnacles and marine growth and effected the rescue. On July 8, 1931, Mr. Francis also rescued Joseph Gillan (deceased) who had fallen between the ship's side and Rithet pier, where the Restorer was moored at the time.

H. A. Gagne, Quathiaski Cove, B.C., for his heroic action in the rescue of Mrs. Jas. McPherson (deceased) from drowning at Island Cove, Campbell River, British Columbia, on December 21, 1931. Mr. Gagne and a friend were proceeding from Campbell River to Quathiaski Cove, when at the entrance of the cove they noticed a boat in distress in the breakers near the rocky point. On going to their assistance they found the occupants of the boat to be Mr. and Mrs. James McPherson. Under the very great difficulty of tide, wind and light they were able to pass them a line. Their line parted and about the same time Mrs. McPherson fell overboard. Mr. Gagne jumped in immediately to her assistance and succeeded in reaching the beach with her. Mrs. McPherson did not survive.

Iva G. Mervyn, Raymond B. Mervyn of Cloverdale and Wilfred Dale of East Kensington, B.C., for their heroic action in the rescue of seven persons from drowning at Crescent Beach, Cloverdale, on June 3, 1931. The Haselmore community picnic was being held at Crescent Beach and a number of young people were sporting in the water. Suddenly there were cries for help from various groups, as the swift tidal undercurrents from the sea had begun to set in and the bathers were seen to be in difficulties. The Mervyns and Wilfred Dale, who were in a boat, immediately made for the point and succeeded in rescuing seven persons, three others being drowned before assistance arrived.

Samuel Lowe, Toronto, for his heroic action in the rescue of John Thompson from drowning in the pond, Ames Estate, Toronto, May 4, 1932. Mr. Lowe was standing on the veranda of his home, when he suddenly heard cries that some one had fallen into the pond. He immediately rushed to the pond and saw the boy, struggling in the water. Without removing any of his clothing, he rushed into the water and got hold of the boy and brought him in to shallow water, where he was assisted by Mr. Fenton, and together they succeeded in getting him out of the water on to the bank.

William Rogers, Norwood, Ont., for his heroic action in attempting to rescue Everett Buchanan from drowning in the Mill Pond, Norwood, September 18, 1931. Mr. Rogers received a telephone call at the garage where he was working, that a man had fallen into the Mill Pond. He was conveyed to the spot in a car, and jumped from the car into the pond. He had to dive twice before bringing the body up, and Mr. Buchanan was too far gone to be revived. Mr. Rogers has four rescues to his credit.

Robert Fenton, Toronto; Aubrey Brown, Winnipeg; Vera Fall, Trenton, Ont.; Jack Tuttle, La Have, N.S.; Charles Walton, Guelph, Ont.; William Warwick, Brockville, Ont.; Kenneth Junkin, Lakefield, Ont.; Bruce Hoch, Kitchener, Ont.; James Hales, Welland, Ont.; Velma Gutchee, Massey, Ont.; Gordon Jones, Toronto; E. Marinetti, Toronto; Ed Reardon, Toronto; John Bailey, Toronto; William Thomas Miles, Vancouver; Irving Small, Moose Jaw, Sask.; Robert B. "Build up the home market for industry by encouraging agriculture," should be the slogan in western Canada for the next few years, it is claimed in the memorandum, one of the outstanding features of which is disapproval of the wheat quota as a means of promoting agricultural interests.

Among other points in the provincial brief are the following:

That necessary machinery should be set up to handle directly all transactions of British and Canadian exchange without recourse to the New York market; that preferential tariffs in Great Britain on empire wheat should be carefully considered as a possible stimulus to empire relations; that special attention be given to ways and means of promoting the livestock and dairy industry; that the work of the empire marketing board be continued and expanded; and that by way of reciprocal concession a very considerable preference might be extended by Canada to many articles of British production.

TERMS GIVEN ON WATERWAY

Ontario Will Be Able to Market Power By Nov., 1938

Canadian Press

Ottawa, July 20.—The Canada-Ontario St. Lawrence agreement terms were announced to-day.

Coming from Prime Minister R. B. Bennett, the announcement is a sequel to the signing of the Canada-United States waterway pact on Monday.

Ontario, which receives 1,100,000 horsepower in the international section, will be in a position to market power on the St. Lawrence by November 1, 1938, under normal conditions.

The agreement recognized, though, that in the light of the world-wide depression prevailing at the present time a certain lag in the development of the power market may be anticipated.

The province will contribute to the Dominion in respect to powerhouse superstructures, common works and for certain deferred works and emergency services the total sum of $67,202,500. For the Chrysler Island development, Ontario will pay to the Dominion $27,115,700 on November 1, 1938, for the Barnhart Island development $35,846,800 on November 1, 1941. To cover the cost of certain substructure works which must necessarily be deferred until such time as power machinery and equipment is being installed, Ontario will pay a further sum of $2,677,500. For the actual cost of the engineering services for the design of the power works. The province will pay to Canada $1,562,500.

Flexibility in the agreement provides for the depression and a slow power market. Provisions have been included under which the Chrysler Island payment by Ontario may be postponed until November 1, 1942, and the Barnhart Island payment until November 1, 1945.

To provide for the contingency of delay in completion of the work Ontario will have one year after completion in which to make payments, but the province must make the payments as soon as the power is used.

The costs of work solely for power are to be assumed by Ontario. An official estimate of this expenditure by the province for power housing and machinery equipment—apart from works common to navigation and power, is $36,931,000.

Expenditures on works solely for navigation, largely in the way of locks, are to be assumed by the Dominion.

"From Southampton to the Strait of Belle Isle this letter is being conveyed by the palatial "Empress of Britain," and from Bell Isle to Ottawa by land and seaplanes of the Royal Canadian Air Force. I should be glad if you would check up on the time it takes in transit, and I am hopeful that you will find it shows a substantial gain over ordinary means of conveyance.

"It will interest you to know that this letter has been flown overland for one-third of the shortest sea-route between Europe and North America.

"The eyes of the world are turned on this combined air-and-sea-way, and there is no doubt that a few years more will see some sort of rapid transit, either exclusively by air or by combined steamship and airplane service along the North Atlantic route.

"The Canadian people have a splendid heritage in the St. Lawrence route. The object of the present flights is to demonstrate the essentially practicable nature of our immediate undertaking, i.e., to convey mail across the ocean by fastest steamship and fly it overland under conditions of safety for one-third of the way. Once this has been established there is every reason to hope the St. Lawrence route can be built up into the premier trans-Atlantic mail route, with all that this implies in the securing of trade and traffic."

Plan to Bring Down City Budget in Fall

aimed at securing a surplus. By drafting the 1933 budget ahead of time, it will mean the laying of a foundation upon which we can work to this end."

AWAIT SURVEY REPORT

He intimated that the budget prepared in October of this year probably would be affected by the report of the city's auditors, who are now conducting an economy survey of all departments.

"We are anxiously awaiting this report at the present time," he said. "None of the council members are aware what it contains as the manuscript will be presented in a sealed envelope to the city clerk and opened at a regular session of the council. However, I think it safe to say that any of its recommendations, if satisfactory to the council, would be included in the fall draft budget."

MAKE ELECTION ISSUE

Drafting of the budget in October would create a lively issue for the annual elections in December, it is anticipated. The incumbents in office would then be able to go before the electorate with a definite financial policy in mind, upon which they could state fixed views.

Mayor Leeming, it is understood, is agreeable to the proposal. He has recently warned the council of the need of foresight in its financial matters and recently reiterated his election slogan that "the city's main problem is one of finance."

Germany Moves to Stop Political Riots

YIELDED TO FORCE

The decree of martial law was issued when Herr Severing declined to accept the president's first emergency decree as binding and declared he would yield only to force. General Gerd von Rundstedt, commander of the Third Reichswehr district, was placed in charge of Berlin and Brandenburg under the martial law order. He was also given command of all police forces in this area.

Chancellor von Papen decided, for the present at least, to remove only Premier Braun and Herr Severing from the Prussian ministry, leaving the rest of the members of the state cabinet in office as his deputies.

Besides deputizing Herr Bracht to exercise the general dictatorial power, he charged him especially to take over Severing's functions as Minister of Interior.

A government spokesman said President von Hindenburg's action was taken only with a view of establishing security and order in Prussia and that it was merely a passing measure.

Herr Bracht arrived here to-day by airplane to begin his duties.

Chancellor von Papen's appointment was legalized by an emergency decree issued by President Paul von Hindenburg. The decree prescribed:

"The Chancellor, as commissioner, is empowdered to remove members of the Prussian state ministry from office and to take over the functions of the Prussian premier and deputize other persons, as commisssioners of the Reich, to conduct the Prussian ministries."

POLITICAL HOUSECLEANING

This was generaly interpreted to mean that a general political housecleaning throughout the Prussian administration was forthcoming.

In political circles the appointment was seen as an effort to build a bridge toward the Centrist Party which is now in violent opposition to the government, even though Chancellor von Papen is a Centrist. It was undestood the cabinet is convinced the Hitlerites will not be able to secure a majority in the Reichstag at the elections which are to be held July 31, and that preparations for some sort of coalition must be made. For this the co-operation of the Centrists is deemed essential.

The martial law order abrogates the articles of the constitution which deal with the right of free speech, the right of assembly, the rights of private property and the privacy of telegraph and telephone and postal communications. All these rights may be curtailed as necessity dictates.

POLICE CONTROL

The police are placed under direct control of Gen. Kurt von Schleicher, the Federal Minister of Defence. Resistance to his orders and those of his deputies may be punishable by death if such resistance involves loss of life.

High treason, mob violence, arson, the use of explosives, damaging of railways and similar offences also may entail capital punishment instead of life imprisonment as hitherto.

The decree provides that the executive authority may demand that the Minister of Justice establish special courts to try lawbreakers.

Acting under these powers, Herr Bracht swept the entire Prussian press department out of office, as one of his acts.

Meanwhile the military, to prevent possible attacks upon the government, reinforced the usual guard and set up machine guns in the court in front of the federal chancellory.

Placards appeared throughout the city bearing announcements by General von Runstedt that he ahd been placed in charge of the execution of martial law. He called upon the people to maintain order. Punishment was threatened for any one defacing the posters.

LABOR ASSEMBLES

The General German Federation of Labor, claiming a membership of 6,000,000, announced that it had summoned delegates from all its member organizations to assemble in Berlin tomorrow for consideration of the political situation.

This afternoon Chancellor von Papen invited the members of the Prussian cabinet, except Otto Braun and Karl Severing, who were deposed, to a meeting this evening under his chairmanship as federal commissioner.

They replied they would not come for they considered the invitation illegal.

It was expected this refusal would mean that the whole cabinet would be removed from office.

BAVARIA PROTESTS

Munich, Bavaria, July 20 (Associated Press)—The Bavarian Government announced to-day it will protest to President von Hindenburg, Chancellor von Papen and the supreme court of Germany against the appointment of a federal commissioner for Prussia as unconstitutional.

Magnificient Pageant To Open Conference

DELEGATES PLEASED

Compliments for the arrangements made by the government for the accommodation of the delegates were voiced last night by Malcolm MacDonald, M.P. The residences and offices charmed him, while that particularly appealed to the British Prime Minister's son was the fact that these residences are no more than a stone's throw from the offices.

Mr. MacDonald thought the deliberations might last "five weeks," which is the cautious estimate of everybody. What emerges from the five weeks remains to be seen; but if the impressiveness of personnels means anything, the results should be thoroughly comprehensive.

MUCH ACTIVITY

To-day the Parliament Buildings were a scene of feverish activity. The novelty of giving innumerable interviews having worn off, the delegates were diving into trunks and packing cases for their data. The heads were polishing off the studied and polite phrases which will adorn their formal addresses to-morrow; the junior members were renewing acquaintances with notable Canadians; the "operating personnel" were filing and pigeonholing their documents; beside it all the general public were clamoring—and clamoring practically in vain—for tickets of admission to the opening. Such decorative and engraved cards simply have no further existence.

No formal ceremony is slated for the conferees to-day. They are all too busy with their own affairs.

tory of Canada and maybe it will be the greatest in the lengthy annals of the Empire as far as practical results are concerned.

EVERYBODY A GREETER

To fill the role of Empire capital for the next few weeks Ottawa has been busy preparing for months. This city is going to show the rest of the Empire that it knows its hospitality. Literally every man in the service of the Canadian Government here, from Premier Bennett down, has become a greeter, with the one great present ambition to make every Empire visitor feel at home.

The Governor-General and the Countess of Bessborough have made extensive preparations to fulfill the formal and official social obligations of the country towards its visitors. At Canada's historic Rideau Hall they will give a series of official receptions and dinners.

Premier Bennett's sister, Mrs. Mildred Bennett Herridge, and her husband, Hon. W. D. Herridge, Canada's minister to the United States, have come up from Washington and taken a home at Rockliffe, where they will entertain extensively.

MEETING THAT WILL COUNT

The Premier himself, besides the formal dinners, will be the host at an intimate little breakfast, luncheon and dinner parties almost every day in his fourteen-room, $112,000 bachelor suite in the Chateau Laurier. Those who know politicians, feel that these intimate gatherings of two or three or four of the key men in the Premier's rooms may prove to be the really important gatherings of the whole conference. Through such personal contact between the leaders, understandings will be reached and crises averted or solved. It is always that way at these conferences. It is what is done by the few behind closed doors that counts.

SOCIAL SECRETARIES BUSY

Other important meeting places where the delegates will get to know one another socially will be Sir Robert and Lady Borden's home, "Glensmere," and "Earnscliffe," the historic Sir John A. Macdonald home, now occupied by Sir William Clark, the British Minister to Canada, and Lady Clark. Sir George Perley, as senior cabinet minister, and Lady Perley have also had their home and famous sunken gardens on Blackburn Avenue put into their best condition. Social secretaries for these leading Ottawans have for some days been compiling lists of names of the delegates as they arrive and working out their tables of precedence.

PRIVATE CARS ARRIVE

From east and from west since the early part of the month, trains of private and special cars have been drawing into the station here at the side of the Rideau Canal. Cabinet ministers, their deputies and secretaries have been dropping down to meet these trains, personally to welcome each new contingent of bespatted and attache-case-carrying arrivals.

Most of the delegates have put up at the Chateau Laurier, the great Canadian National Hotel, which for years has housed and fed most of the visitors to Ottawa that count commercially, politically, socially and last, but not least, financially.

A few of the delegates are staying with personal friends, and some have been put up at Ottawa's exclusive clubs, which are usually deserted during the hot weather and 'tween-session seasons.

The actual sessions of the conference will take place in the House of Commons. The committee rooms have been turned over to the various delegations.

READY FOR BROADCASTS

Radio men have been busy during the last day linking up the microphones in the House with a network which will cover every part of Canada and carry to every Canadian the opening proceedings of the conference tomorrow morning. I understand the coast-to-coast broadcasting of this will start at about 6.45 o'clock Thursday morning, Victoria time. So most Victorians will be able to take in the opening of the Imperial Economic Conference with their grapefruit and coffee to-morrow. There will be more conference speech-making on the air later in the day with the broadcasting of the official state dinner. This will be on the air over Canadian stations from about 6 o'clock on, Victoria time. Some of the key men of the conference will be on the air at these two gatherings.

After the opening broadcasts to-morrow, the conference will pretty much go behind closed doors as far as the public is concerned. There will be official statements, inspired statements and psychological statements issued, but for a while, at least, there is to be no direct and detailed newspaper reporting of the actual happenings in the conference chamber.

OFFICIAL SPOKESMAN NAMED

The public will be kept informed as to the day-to-day proceedings of the conference by official communiques in which facts which should not be made public or gain discussion outside of the inner official circles, will be subject to effective censorship. The conference will daily be pictured to the pepole of Canada through the eyes of Hon. R. J. Manion, Minister of Railways and Canals. Dr. Manion announced that he has been appointed to act as the link with the press, holding a position similar to that of Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Dominions, at the last conference in London.

Dr. Manion explains that he will likely meet the newspapermen after each closed session, and at these gatherings he will clear up points on which light needed to be shed and give out such information as he thought the public should know about what was transpiring. In this work, Dr. Manion will be assisted by Malcolm MacDonald, M.P., Under-secretary of State for the Colonies in the British National Government, and son of Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald.

MANY OTHERS BUT NO DISGRUNTLED

Lawyers, directors, propagandists, publicity and contact men for all the industries of this country and the chief ones of the other Empire countries who may, or fear they may, be affected by the trend of negotiations at the conference fill Ottawa. They have made extensive preparations to make their presence effective when their turn comes.

However, there is one group that the government has decided will not be there. That is the group of disgruntled farmers. These men have been threatening to pour into Ottawa from the west, and after the manner of the army of unemployed veterans camping on the steps of the Capitol and in the parks of Washington, D.C., make themselves and their grievances felt in and around the House of Commons, while the Imperial and Dominion statesmen are gathered.

OTTAWA CLEANED UP

For some weeks, the police have been cleaning up Ottawa, so that the streets of the capital will present a healthy appearance to the important visitors and not be cluttered up by idle men. Orders to move-on have sent hundreds of unemployed men here traveling in all directions. To prevent the influx of disgruntled farmers or the threatened invasion of the Capital by bonus-seeking veterans, four uniformed Royal Canadian Mounted Police have been put on every east-bound train out of Calgary to turn back such transients headed east during the weeks of the Imperial Conference. All across the prairies thousands of jobless east-bound travelers are being taken off freight and other trains and turned back by the police. The result is that at the end of last week, it was estimated by officials there that Calgary was filling up with such idle men at the rate of 400 to 500 a day. Many of the men taken off eastbound trains have been put aboard westbound trains and headed towards the British Columbia cities again and away from Ottawa.

All of which only goes to prove that Ottawa really is the cynosure of all, without distinction of class.

Canadian Press

Hamilton, July 20.—Pearl fishing in Ontario? It does not sound likely, but it is a fact.

A returned soldier, George Robinson, who came out of the war gassed and crippled to tackle the problem of providing for a family of youngsters, has been harvesting clams for the last seven years, and making a living out of it. The scene of his operations is the Grand River at Caledonia, Ont.

Pearls are a secondary consideration with Robinson. The shells are shipped to the United States, where they are ultimately converted into pear buttons. Every clam is examined for its possible pearl content, and Robinson has garnered a collection of beautiful gems.

Shortly after dawn each day Robinson and his three eldest sons arrive at the river and plan out the day's operations. The boys start out with flat-bottomed boats, poling in shallow water until they find a prospect. In knee-deep water, they scoop into the mud with their hands—the government does not allow harvesting clams with boats—lifting the giant clams from the mud and tossing them into the boat. In deeper water they use a wire snare. The clam, like the oyster, lets the water flow between its valves or shells and feeds on the organic matter brought to it.

CLAMS ARE COOKED

The harvest is taken to the cooking plant on shore where Robinson has a huge steel-bottomed tank, about eight feet long, built over a fireplace. The clams are thrown into the tank and cooked, after fifteen minutes the meat swells up, spreading the shells and tearing free. Robinson makes an examination of the mollusks for pearls. The meat too is dissected as carefully as a surgeon would make a pathological examination. Occasionally a pearl rewards the search. Frequently mother-of-pearl slugs are taken from the membranes.

The government collects a royalty of $5 on every ton of clams taken from the river, and Robinson is licensed in addition. He has but one pay day a year. "We wait until fall and then ship a carload," he said. "I grade my own shell now and it runs 98 per cent perfect."

Grand River clams are divided into eight breeds—muckets, niggertoes, sand shells, large pocketbooks, crystal backs, squaw-foots, three ridges and pig toes. The last three are of no commercial value, being off-color, too small or too uneven in structure.

Robinson's is the only commercial clam bed on the Grand River. Fished judicially it will be worked for eighteen to twenty years, but the commercial rule is to rest the bed in five-year cycles.

Trade With New Zealand Doubled

REFUSED TO TAKE RISK

New Kind of Insurance Suggested By Enterprising Promoter

Montreal, July 20.—Here is a new type of insurance asked for which proved to be one of the few not granted.

An enterprising young business manager wishing to organize an excursion to Sorel, Que., or thereabouts on August 31 to view the total eclipse of the sun taking place on that date had fear of bad weather ruining his venture.

He therefore made application for insurance to protect him against this possibility, but officials of the company upon investigation found that the next total eclipse was scheduled to take place 300 to 400 years hence. This would mean a long time to wait for a possible opportunity to regain the loss in case of bad weather on August 31 this year, so the applicant's request was refused.

Chances for fine weather on that date, however, are 50-50 according to McGill University scientists who will take into consideration the time of the day the eclipse will occur and weather statistics for this district over a period of many years.

GANGSTER SLAIN—Long the object of one of the most intensive man-hunts in eastern police history, Edward "Fats" McCarthy (above), gang veteran and ruthless killer, was tracked to his hideaway near Albany, N.Y., and shot to death in a grim gun battle with two New York detectives and two state troopers. McCarthy was commonly credited in underworld circles with the slaying of Jack "Legs" Diamond, the New York racket chieftain.

EXPERTS STUDY LONELY ISLAND

Canadian Press

Manchester, England, July 29—Lonely Tristan da Cunha, rarely visited except by the yearly warship or a passing whaler, has suddenly become of scientific importance. It is to be visited by forty Brazilian experts who propose to make a long stay. Their researches will be mainly meteorological, but this wind-swept, extinct volcano, rising to a height of 8,000 feet, possesses many features of scientific interest.

The inhabitants are hardly less interesting to anthropologists. They are descendants of Corporal Glass and four other soldiers who remained behind when the British garrison was withdrawn 100 years ago and were subsequently joined by two shipwrecked sailors and a whaler's cook. Wives were brought to them from St. Helena.

The present islanders, who number 163, were pronounced "remarkably healthy" by some surgeons and dentists sent to them by the Cape of Good Hope Government last January. They are very daring navigators, and, in their home-made canvas-boats, they sometimes capture sealions and even whales. Their chief recreations are reading, gardening, church-going and collecting sea birds' eggs. They are virtually a communist community, presided over by their Anglican chaplain, Rev. A. G. Partridge, who lately came to England for a brief holiday, which he has curtailed in order to return to his little flock with the Brazilian expedition.

LORD PLUMER IS BURIED IN ABBEY

Associated Press

London, July 20.—The last wish of Field Marshal Lord Plumer, war hero, who died last Saturday, was granted today with his burial in ancient Westminster Abbey.

He had expressed a desire to be buried near the tomb of Britain's unknown soldier and it was in the new warriors' chapel, close to this spot, that the field marshal's body was placed.

The funeral ceremony was attended with all military pomp. The flag-draped coffin, surmounted by a great white wreath and the field marshal's plumed hat, was accompanied by an imposing escort of red-coated guards, headed by massed bands. The route was lined solidly by panoplied guardsmen, other detachments of His Majesty's armed forces and throngs of sorrowing people.

The second largest bell in the world has been cast for the University of Chicago.

NEW UNIVERSITY BLOCK IN LONDON

Fine Educational Building Planned Near British Museum

Canadian Press

London, July 20.—A great new block of buildings, with a high, stepped tower dominating the landscape, has been planned for the new home of the University of London, and it is hoped that when the university celebrates its centenary a few years hence the new buildings will be ready. A block model has been prepared by the architect, Charles Holden, and approved by the court and senate.

It is proposed to create the new university centre on a site in Bloomsbury, at the rear of the British Museum, covering, with open spaces, ten and one-half acres. The site has been acquired largely through the aid of the Rockefeller Foundation. A university official says work may be begun next year.

Accommodation will be provided for the administrative offices of the university and the library. Adjacent to these will be a number of other university institutions, such as the Institute of Historical Research, the Courtauld Institute of Art, the School of Oriental Studies, the School of Slavonic Studies, the London Day Training College and Birkbeck College.

The base of the tower will serve as the main entrance to the buildings, the administrative buildings being to the south and the library and scholastic to the north. These entrances will be approached from Malet Street, on the west, and from Russell Square on the east.

The main group of buildings is placed centrally on the site, the open spaces being distributed along the two main frontages and providing car parking accommodation. On the east side an open space will be planned as a private garden, with a covered walk along the Woburn Square frontage.

M'GILL ADDS TO CANADIANA

Montreal, July 20 (By Canadian Press)—A valuable addition to McGill University's collection of Canadiana is a photostat reproduction of a splendid historical map of the Island of Orleans made in 1869. The copy has been presented to the museum by Mr. Judge Camille Pouliot of Quebec.

The map was made by "Villeneuve, Ingenieur du Roi" and besides giving a detailed view of the island contains a list of barns, dwellings and granaries in each of the districts.

Judge Pouliot obtained the map from the Ministry of Marine in France and has had several copies made to be placed in various Canadian museums.

BRITISH PLAYS LEAD BROADWAY

Films Are Also Gaining Recognition in United States

Toronto, July 20 (By Canadian Press)—"The leadership of British stage artistry is frequently acknowledged by Broadway's leading authorities and the merit of British films is also gaining recognition in the United States," writes The Evening Telegram's special Broadway correspondent.

"Recently," he adds, "a recognized American stage authority selected the ten finest portrayals of the current Broadway season and behold six of the first seven are from England."

This authority was Eugene H. Burr of the Billboard, leading American dramatic organ. His selections were as follows: Charles Laughton in "Payment Deferred," Cicely Oates in "Payment Deferred," Alla Nazimova in "Mourning Becomes Electra," Colin Keith-Johnson in "Hamlet," Nigel Bruce in "Springtime for Henry," Leslie Howard in "The Animal Kingdom," Edna Best in "There's Always Juliet," Herbert Marshall in "There's Always Juliet," Claude Rains in "The Moon in the Yellow River," Lauretta Taylor in "Alice Sit-by-the-Fire," and "The Old Lady Shows Her Medals."

The first seven of Mr. Burr's ten best artists include six (Nazimova is the exception) actors who derive from England. Such honor as this, from a disinterested American-born reviewer, tells much about the standing of the British player on the Broadway legitimate stage.

GANG GUNMEN ARE ROUNDED UP IN FATAL DUEL WITH DARING POLICE

SIR HENRY THORNTON'S RESIGNATION

THE RESIGNATION OF SIR HENRY Thornton as president of the Canadian National Railways may mean that the bedevilment of Canada's great publicly-owned transportation system will now proceed without restraint under the guiding hand of Ottawa and Montreal, unless the Canadian people manifest their will in a manner which will penetrate sharply into the councils of the government. It is scarcely likely that even the loud fan-fare—much of which is stage-managed—introducing the Imperial Economic Conference and the signing of the St. Lawrence treaty, will divert the public mind from the ominous significance of this startling development which may concern the destinies of the Dominion much more intimately than a dozen conferences. Nowhere else in the world is the relationship between a country's welfare and its railway services as close as it is in Canada. Nowhere else is it possible for a gigantic railway monopoly to affect the lives of the people as intensively as it could in Canada. It is this unique condition which makes the retirement of Sir Henry Thornton from the control of the splendid structure he erected on behalf of the Canadian people an exigency which in importance dwarfs every other national consideration.

The record makes it painfully clear that the elimination of Sir Henry Thornton was one of the bright, particular objectives the Bennett administration had in mind from the hour of its birth. The atmosphere at Ottawa, which up to that fateful moment had been friendly, became charged with hostility which the public utterances of the Prime Minister and his Minister of Railways could not obscure. Mr. Bennett's glib "co-operation ever, amalgamation never," and Dr. Manion's after-dinner tributes to the President were just so much stage-thunder. It was not forgotten by close observers that the Prime Minister had been associated for many years with the Canadian Pacific Railway Company as counsel and in other ways, as well as with the other Montreal interests which were bitterly opposed to public ownership of utilities, while among his followers in the House of Commons and the Senate were a number of implacable enemies of the national system.

It was not surprising, therefore, that within a very short time after the government's accession to power in 1930 the business of discrediting the national system and its president was started. The Hansons, Hacketts, McGibbons and others were given full rein. In every session the Canadian National was projected to the centre of the stage and made the target of sustained attack which as time went on became more bitter and personal. Advantage was taken of depressed conditions to prejudice the public mind against the management on the ground of extravagant expenditures, although nothing was said about the extravagant expenditures of other great transcontinental railway corporations, while the extravagance of governments apparently was regarded as a virtue. Outside the House a persistent press propaganda was started, although for the most part the Canadian newspapers without regard to party politics were sympathetic with the national system and its management.

Nothing was said, of course, about the incomparable services rendered by Sir Henry Thornton in consolidating the various defunct railways which had been taken over by the government of Sir Robert Borden, into a magnificent, unified system, and the remarkably fine spirit of service and responsibility he instilled into its large army of employees; nor of his transformation of these hopelessly bankrupt fragments into an establishment which, in spite of the load of fixed charges it had inherited, became an important national asset. The wreckers were determined that Sir Henry had to go and the system offered up as a sacrifice on the altar of private ownership.

Last session saw the culmination of this precious plot in an onslaught upon Sir Henry Thornton himself. The hostility against him had become impregnated with a new virus, that of jealousy, always the product of small mentalities. His prominence and popularity throughout the country had become intolerable to the Ottawa autocracy, which had reduced cabinet ministers to the status of office boys, and regarded the electors as a collection of ignorant negligibles, whose gospel plainly was that "two stars keep not their motion in one sphere," and one of them had to be extinguished. That one star, the Premier, should shine in a fifteen-room suite at the Chateau Laurier which cost the taxpayers $125,000 for which the publicly-owned hotel received ninety cents per day per room, and traveled in a private car which cost $100,000 to rebuild, of course, was all right.

Meanwhile the debauching of the national system has been systematically going on. The services and equipment of the railroad have been curtailed in many directions, while those of its great rival have been continued. The through-transcontinental Canadian National train has been taken off altogether. Before long the whole system probably will be strangled to the point where the government, while shedding crocodile tears, will hand it over to its competitor, and railroad competition in Canada will be a thing of the past—unless the Canadian public, long suffering under impositions of all kinds, peremptorily calls a halt.

Sir Henry Thornton was engaged by the government of Mackenzie King to reorganize and operate the several railway systems which, having hopelessly failed under private ownership, notwithstanding the hundreds of millions of subsidies they had received from the public purse, had been taken over by the Conservative administration of Sir Robert Borden. He was regarded as the best available man for this job in the light of his successful record as president of the Great Eastern Railway in England, and his distinguished war service. Probably no other executive in the history of railroading had been confronted with so formidable a task, although most of the presidents of the major railway systems in the United States received much larger remuneration. The president of the Pennsylvania system, of approximately 10,000 miles, receives $135,000 a year, which is $60,000 more than the head of the Canadian National Railways, with its 22,000 miles, has been receiving. The Governor-General and his Ottawa establishment cost more than $200,000 a year.

Sir Henry consolidated these bankrupt railroad properties into one great organization. He concentrated his best ability and interests upon the human factor and developed a fine spirit of co-operation between the executives and the rank and file of employees. He established a personal bond of mutual goodwill and responsibility with every person in the system. Confident of Canada's future, he sought to develop the big project under his charge to the highest order of efficiency. Within a few years as the result of his policy the revenues of the system increased and, in spite of the load of liabilities against it, dating back to 1853, he brought it to the point where it held every promise of meeting all the financial demands against it.

The prospects at that time were so roseate that not only transportation companies and other large industrial enterprises were engaging in heavy commitments but governments—not excluding the government of British Columbia—were spending lavishly, while the general public was playing the stock market and to a large extent living beyond its means. If Sir Henry erred in this respect, so did every other executive on this continent. Unhappily the slump of 1929, which has imperilled the financial solvency of every other railroad system, as well, in fact, as that of every government—the United States government has been lending millions to the big privately-owned systems there—naturally compromised the Canadian National road. For this Sir Henry Thornton was no more responsible than Mr. Bennett, who was going to restore prosperity in "three days." Indeed, Sir Henry has worn himself out in the service of the Canadian people, and now has fallen a victim to a sinister campaign of incredible meanness the sequel to which may be fraught with grave consequences to the future of this country.

THE CONFERENCE

ALTHOUGH THE CONFERENCE which will be opened at Ottawa to-morrow has been called to deal specifically with economic rather than political or constitutional matters, it is none the less one of the series of gatherings which had their inception in 1887. In that year the Prime Ministers of the various parts of the empire were in London to attend the celebrations of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria, and they made use of the opportunity thus afforded to discuss matters of mutual interest. Another meeting of imperial statesmen was held in London in 1902. These two assemblies were known as Colonial Conferences and they were presided over by the British Colonial Secretary. But the gathering of 1907 was given the name of Imperial Conference and on that occasion the Prime Minister of Great Britain, Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, acted as chairman of the meeting.

The next conference took place in 1911, but the intervention of the Great War made it desirable for empire statesmen to meet twice during that conflict, in 1917 and again in 1918, other meetings being held in 1921, 1923, 1926 and in 1930. The last four conferences, however, have been held under auspices quite different from those of pre-war and war-time periods, especially those of 1926 and 1930. While the part the empire played in the war and at the Peace Conference—the entrance into the League of Nations of the dominions—had served as a sort of notification to the outside world that Canada, Australia, South Africa, and New Zealand had grown up and were quite capable of looking after their own business; and while in effect they were doing it and doing it well, it was not until the conference of 1926 that the famous declaration was drawn up which defined the position and mutual relation of Great Britain and the dominions as follows: "They are autonomous communities within the British Empire, equal in status, in no way subordinate one to another in any aspect of their domestic or external affairs, though united by a common allegiance to the Crown, and freely associated as members of the British Commonwealth of Nations." The phraseology of this document did not alter the constitutional position of the dominions; it merely advertised the fact to those who thought the dominions were run from Downing Street, that this was not so. Nor did the document, on the other hand, remove certain constitutional anomalies in the relations between Great Britain and the dominions. But these have since been disposed of by the Statute of Westminster, which makes each dominion the complete mistress of her own affairs in every respect.

The conference of 1930 was really one with a double agenda—one to deal with imperial affairs of mutual welfare in general, and the other purely economic. The economic part of that family gathering was not a success. There is no need to refer to its deliberations in detail here. The government of Great Britain of that day was not in the mood to accept a certain proposal which the Prime Minister of Canada, Mr. Bennett, made on that occasion. It was because of the failure to reach an economic agreement that the meeting adjourned until a future date. Mr. Bennett invited the empire statesmen to come to Ottawa and take up the threads again. Most people are familiar with what has transpired in the meantime. The 1932 Imperial Economic Conference will commence its deliberations in the Canadian capital to-morrow. The peoples of all the empire countries will hope that much good will come of it and that a lead to better times will be given to the world at large.

MONETARY REFORM
Canadian Radical (Montreal)

It is encouraging to those who have for some years been interested in the money problem as it affects human relationships to note the intense interest being shown in all phases of this subject. It is now front page news and the hope is that before many years there will be general agreement as to the sort of money which will make it as easy for one as for another to share in the bounty of nature.

Loose Ends

Dire things happen, unknown, under our very noses—dynamite is ready to explode not far away—the movies do an intelligent thing—and it is resolved to crush out vice.

By H. B. W.

DARK AND DIRE things continue to happen on the far side of the Causeway, without us suspecting that anything of importance is under way. The political correspondent of The Vancouver Province records that this capital is sitting on a keg of dynamite with the fuse already half burned. The final explosion, he says, may be expected at any moment and meanwhile the Parliament Buildings are reported to be seething with preparations and expectations, with excursions and alarms, with suspense and expectation. Yes, there is going to be a show-down or a blow-up or perhaps both, which should be a jolly spectacle on a summer evening, if the weather is warm and the moon full. You had better put in your application for a reserved seat right away.

ALTOGETHER IT IS most remarkable and exciting to find that all this activity is under way in Parliament Buildings which, to me, appear utterly at peace, with peace which, in these times, passeth understanding. I was over there the other day and I saw nothing seething, no dynamite, no fuses, no excursions or alarms. It seems to me a gross discrimination against the home town folks when outside observers are allowed to see all these hair-raising things and we can find nothing in our own Parliament Buildings more alarming than American tourists admiring our hideous legislative chamber. I mean, if the government is really going to do something worth while like showing-down or blowing-up, we ought to be allowed in on the fun. After all, what do we pay taxes for? To tell the truth I have often wondered.

ONE OF THE most intelligent things the movies have done for a long time is to show extracts from the films made twenty or twenty-five years ago. They are interesting because they amuse and flatter us at the same time. They are crude enough to delight anyone and they make us realize how much more sophisticated, how much more civilized, we have become since those days. It seems quite incredible, indeed, that we could ever have looked at such idiotic heroes, such stout heroines and such preposterous, be-whiskered villains as flourished in that far-off time when we and the century were young.

BUT AS YOU see these old pictures, don't laugh too soon or too loudly. Your turn will come next. Twenty-five years from now they will laugh just as hard at us. They will probably die laughing as they view the present-day movies which, by that time, will appear just as crude as those of 1910 do to-day. Even now I can hear their shrieks of delight at the spectacle of Greta Garbo, as she appeared here last week, in clinging velvet pants and a white wig and later in a hat evidently made for an organ grinder's monkey, with her hair trailing about her face like seaweed on a clam. Probably by that time they will have expanded their notions of feminine beauty and will no longer worship female skeletons as we do. They will laugh at our actresses, at our pictures, at our plots, but more than anything, they will laugh at us. The present spectacle of the world and the mess we have made of it, when we have everything at hand to make us happy, will appear riotously funny to them and our tragedies, like the fierce melodramas of twenty years ago, will be their jests. Like the unfortunate actors of the early movies, we are all going to be low comedians to our grandchildren.

IN VANCOUVER THEY have solemnly resolved that they will rid their city of the appalling vice of gambling in Chinatown. At this every good citizen will rejoice with satisfaction and civic pride and cheerful hypocrisy. The trouble with these misguided Chinese is that they don't know how to gamble so as to be within the law. If they would disguise themselves as prosperous business men drinking Scotch whisky in a well-furnished club, over a poker game, no one would stop their amusement. Or if they would pretend to be society women spending the entire afternoon and a week's wages on their bridge game while they sipped cocktails, the police would not think of interfering. But these unhappy heathens will insist on playing fan tan, the results of which are the same as poker in a white man's club or bridge in a white lady's drawing-room, but which has the fatal weakness of being a Chinese sport. They will insist on playing fan tan but their fatal mistake, of course, is being Chinese themselves. That is what the law really objects to and can never forgive.

SPEAKING OF SUCH low things, I recently witnessed a real old western blackjack game, conducted publicly before a substantial crowd at a place in the Cariboo which I shall never reveal. I mean, if I did, somebody might interfere with this pastime and that would be too bad. You could play as high as you liked in this blackjack game and some of the cowboys, having recently drawn several months' pay, were able to risk as high as $5 on a hand. But the ancient dealer, a gentleman whose face was a beautiful study in benign guile, had no difficulty in coming out ahead in the end for he had a remarkable system of controlling the cards. He could positively turn up a black jack whenever he wanted one.

WHEN YOU WENT into the game he invariably turned you up a black jack on the first or second hand. Thus encouraged, you would raise your next bet. But you never won again. Whenever there was a big pot, the dealer with a smile like a well-fed sphinx, would deal himself a black jack and you invariably quit the game several dollars short. I tried to fathom his remarkable system and came to the conclusion that his habit of shuffling only the few cards on top of the pack had something to do with it, but the cowboys are too good sports to consider such a matter. They lost their money like gentlemen and the law, which wasn't far off, naturally made no objection. There were no Chinamen present. Everybody was white and satisfied.

HELPING THE NEEDY

To the Editor:—In reply to Widow With Children who thinks it quite all right to use relief money to attend movies or purchase meat with would say if I had anything to do with the distribution of the money I would prove to her that "every mother is not capable of making her money go as far as it should."

If she was an economical and thoughtful mother she would pack up a basket of food and take the children for a picnic in the fresh air in place of attending a movie. A couple of loaves of bread sliced and buttered, a bottle of milk and a potato salad would be fine.

But, as she says: "She is entitled to the luxuries the rich have, she would require a bottle of ketchup, an iced cake, cookies and ice cream, and perhaps a few bottles of beer or pop.

I once saw a kiddie come into a grocery store for a bottle of ketchup that then sold at 40 cents. The proprietor said: "What did you do with the bottle you got in your order yesterday?"

Kiddie said: "We spread it on bread and ate it all."

The proprietor told the husband and he said: "My wife is a poor manager. After this in filling their order just put in what you think they require."

THE ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAYS SCHEME

To the Editor:—Why all this great haste to reach an agreement on the St. Lawrence waterways undertaking? I am aware that there is an election pending in the United States and this agreement once ratified by the Canadian people would make a very valuable political slogan in that contest, but why should the taxpayers of Canada be expected to pull Mr. Hoover's chestnuts out of the fire at such a huge cost? What has Mr. Hoover done for, or rather to, Canada except to add duty to duty and bring about a reduction in the value of our dollar in the United States to 85 cents?

A few years ago we were railway building mad, next we became wheat farming mad, then paper mill building mad, highway building mad, and after all of these costly mistakes and disappointing experiences entailing the loss of hundreds of millions of dollars of the people's money, and the piling up of an enormous debt, we are now asked to shoulder this stupendous burden for the purpose of still further increasing our power and transportation facilities of which we already have a surplus.

The addition of this enormous amount of power in the United States would do away with the necessity of any industries from that country looking to Canada, as in the past, for locations adjacent to low cost water power as they would have ample power in their own country. It would also assist an already too wealthy country in building up industries, towns and cities along our borders, increasing a competition that is even now far too keen.

The suggestion that this development should be paid for on a fifty-fifty basis is of course also ridiculous, as the United States, with her 120,000,000 people clamoring for cheap power, would derive twelve time the advantage that Canada would with her 10,000,000 population, even provided we did not already have a surplus of power and transportation.

With this large additional amount of power that would be thrown on the market, on the Canadian side, our hydro companies would be in exactly the same plight that the pulp and paper and lumber industries are today; namely, swamped from overproduction. As for increased transportation facilities, one of the major ills from which we are already suffering is that we are overtransportationized, having too many waterways, too many railways and too many highways.

Another serious phase to be considered is the fact that for every dam erected across a river the amount of water that flows below the dam is lessened through the extra evaporation and seepage, caused by the added water surface created by each dam or other obstruction that is erected in the river.

In the shipping season we are even now confronted with a shortage of water, both in the lake ports and the St. Lawrence, to such an extent that steamers during low water periods are unable to take full cargoes from Montreal, and anything that would further reduce the flow would be a serious menace, not only to Montreal, but to the lake ports and the entire St. Lawrence.

We have to face the fact that in any event we shall have lower water conditions not only in our great artery, the St. Lawrence, but in all our lakes and rivers—which will be a progressive lowering from year to year, as we devastate a few more million acres annually. I only recently examined rivers in Ontario that were used for water transportation when that section was well timbered, but which can now be crossed on foot in the summer season.

Deepening the river channel is merely a temporary expedient, which by lowering the water level will simply accelerate the run-off and consequent drying up process, and it will also reduce the fertility of long stretches of some of the finest agricultural land in the St. Lawrence Valley.

What are we to do with all of this surplus power after it is developed?

Where is the water coming from to float all of this shipping? If the river ran the other way and we had an ocean draw from it would be quite feasible from a water supply standpoint, but not under present conditions when our depth of water is already inadequate for present shipping and is being reduced by forest devastation and will be still further reduced through mechanical conditions produced by the proposed development.

If this waterway is ever completed and accomplishes all that its promoters claim, what is to become of all of our other transportation systems that have been developed at such enormous cost?

Canadians must also face the serious fact that the day this agreement is ratified, Canada permanently loses control of an important part of the greatest commercial asset we have left, namely, the mighty St. Lawrence.

If this colossal blunder were permitted, I for one would cross the seas and make my domicile in the homeland rather than see a foreign flag floating over Canadian waters.

An agreement between nations means nothing; we have evidence of this in connection with the so-called Chicago Drainage Canal. We have further evidence in the case of Ireland at the present time as well as many more instances that might be mentioned. The only way that these contracts can be enforced is with an army and the wiser course to pursue is not to provide the cause.

We are piling up a huge debt causing the assessment of taxes that are so unbearable that they are producing just cause for a revolt that is becoming stronger upon the receipt of every new tax bill and we are at the same time stripping our country of its most vital natural resource, our forest, without profit even to the operators themselves.

If there was sufficient water to float the ships.

If this water was not becoming less and less, as we continue denuding our country of trees.

If we were not already staggering under a burden of surplus transportation, a surplus that under the most optimistic estimate it will take twenty-five years to utilize to capacity.

If we had the money.

If we could retain absolute control of our own river without resort to bloodshed.

If we had any use for the power.

And if it would not force all our present hydro-companies into bankruptcy, then I am sure no one would raise a protest, but like our forest outlook, there are too many ifs in the way.

The above are merely a few of the serious aspects of this waterways scheme, many others could be mentioned if space permitted.

Conditions are improving and will be greatly accelerated through results that can and will be achieved by the distinguished galaxy that will surround the council table under the leadership of Canada's talented Prime Minister, at the most important gathering ever held within the British Empire, beginning with the opening of the Imperial Economic Conference at Ottawa this week. Therefore why not apply all our energies in the direction of bigger and better markets through empire channels and allow our own flag to continue to wave over the beautiful St. Lawrence?

"My Son will go to College"

Can you say this of your little son—or daughter?

You know the advantage of a college education. How large corporations are now looking to college graduates to eventually fill their responsible positions.

You intend to give your boy or girl a college education—but are you sure you will live long enough to provide it? Or if you do, that funds will be on hand when he needs them—$1,000 a year, say, for 4 years?

The problem can be settled very readily through an Imperial Educational Endowment Policy. The yearly deposits are small and vary in amount according to age. Even these are cancelled should the father die or become totally disabled before his child is ready for college.

Your child should have this splendid safeguard. Write for particulars to-day.

Woman Coal Mine Operator Says "Good House-keeping" Needed in Business

Wise Capitalism Should Care For Workers as Well as Shareholders

New York, July 20.—A wise capitalism should take care of its workers as well as its stockholders, according to Miss Josephine Roche, who believes the troubles of capitalistic society are caused chiefly by "bad housekeeping."

Miss Roche is the young women who took over the Rocky Mountain Fuel Company in 1928. She invited her men to form the first coal miners' union in Colorado. In the first quarter of 1932, paying her miners the highest wages in the state, she sold 13 per cent more coal than in the corresponding period of 1931. Coal production and sales for Colorado as a whole were down 4½ per cent during that period.

During 1931 the state's coal production declined 20 per cent. Her company sold 2½ per cent more than in the previous year. She was paying her men considerably more than non-union competitors.

Miss Roche explains the apparent paradox. She could pay these wages and still sell coal as cheaply as the other mines because her miners increased their efficiency. They cut the cost of production 26 cents per ton in 1931 as compared with 1928.

Instead of cutting wages, Miss Roche believes, industrial heads should turn their minds to eliminating waste and inefficiency. "I am certain that other industries are filled with the same bad housekeeping I discovered in coal," she says.

Miss Roche knew little or nothing about coal in 1927 when she inherited a large block of stock in the company from her father. An outbreak in which six miners were killed by deputies aroused her to her "responsibility." She obtained control, and invited the miners to form a union and help run the company.

The contract provided that the miners receive 23 cents more per day than the base rate paid in non-union mines.

Last August when Colorado's non-union mines reduced coal prices 50 to 75 per cent, her miners voluntarily offered half their wages for nearly three months, which allowed her to meet the competition. The non-union mines gave up and went back to the regular prices.

When a recipe calls for MILK Use ST. CHARLES

Whenever a recipe calls for milk it is a safe rule always to use Borden's St. Charles Evaporated Milk. St. Charles is economical, simple to use and definitely imparts an improved flavor to your cooking.

It's better and you can Prove it

Only milk that has been subjected to the highest tests for purity and richness is good enough for acceptance in the St. Charles plants. Packed under the most sanitary conditions, St. Charles Milk represents the best evaporated milk you can buy—see that you ask for it by name. ST. 9. 11

Scotland Yard Is Training Young Women Detectives

London, July 20.—Scotland Yard has proved that women can keep a secret.

It has appointed—for the first time in its history—women detectives who in every sense of the word will be real detectives, working in plain clothes with experienced male officers, probing murder mysteries or bandit raids. For months these women have been secretly trained at Scotland Yard, and they have not divulged a word to anybody. Three of them are now "on the strength" of the Criminal Investigation Department. It is expected that another twenty or thirty will complete their training shortly, and will work with men detectives in the Metropolitan area.

All that can be said at the moment is that they are young, and have been chosen largely for their capacity for forming friendships. Definite evidence has been obtained by the Yard that there are clever women criminals associated with modern bandit gangs, and the women detectives will have a big chance in locating them.

Princess Beatrice Has Eye Operation

London, July 20.—Princess Beatrice, aunt of the King and mother of former Queen Victoria of Spain, underwent an operation to-day for removal of a cataract from her right eye.

Her condition was reported satisfactory.

Daughters of St. George—The Victoria Lodge No. 83 Daughters of St. George held its regular meeting Monday night in the S.O.E. Hall, W.P. Sister Penketh in the chair. It was decided to commemorate the anniversary of the lodge by holding a basket picnic at the Lagoon on August 3. Following the business session a whist drive was held. Mr. and Mrs. Bell were winners of first prize; consolation prizes were given to Mr. Mace and Mrs. Brian. Refreshments were served by Sister Petre.

8 DIFFERENT TIMES HER JELLIES WON 1st PRIZE

"Certo is very satisfactory in jellies. I showed apple jelly and won first prize. There's never a failure and I use Certo for all jams and jellies, even gooseberry." That's what Mrs. Dempsey, Britannia Heights, Ont., tells us. Wouldn't you like to have the same success with your jams and jellies? Well, you can if you use Certo.

A Quick, Easy Way

Requires only a few minutes' boiling (follow directions carefully) and you'll get a perfect set. No failures, no waste and, 50% more jelly from a given amount of fruit. Certo can be used with any fruit—fresh, canned, dried—or fruit juice. You'll be delighted with it.

The Certo recipe booklet under the label of every Certo bottle is famous for its 87 home-tested recipes. Always follow directions exactly. Then you can use any fruit with sure success. And that includes fruits, too, that never before would jell. Get a bottle now.

Don't be perplexed by any problem of jam or jelly making. Should you desire any information whatsoever, write to the Consumer Service Department, General Foods, Limited, Cobourg, Ontario.

CERTO

Made in Canada

CERTO
—Is fruit pectin.
—The natural jellying substance extracted from fruit.
—Jells the juice that would have boiled away by the old (long-boil) method.
—Makes 50% more jam or jelly at less cost per jar.

IMPRESSED BY SUNSHINE CAMP

Representatives of the City Council, including Mayor Leeming and Alderman P. R. Brown, of the Friendly Help, Saanich Welfare Association and the Oak Bay council visited the Sunshine Camp at Saseenos yesterday afternoon to see at first hand something of the work being accomplished at this holiday camp for tired and sick mothers and their children.

Members of the Social Service League accompanied the visitors to the camp and took them on a tour of inspection, the visitors chatting with a number of the women and their kiddies who, after only a few days, show a decided improvement in health as a result of the beneficial rest and good food.

Tea was served, Mrs. M. G. Moore being in charge of the arrangements, and before leaving the visitors expressed their keen interest in the humanitarian work.

Recent donations to the camp amount to $156, of which grateful acknowledgement is made. As more funds are needed to ensure the camp continuing throughout the summer, further donations will be gartefully welcomed.

Pretty Wedding At Port Angeles Of Interest Here

The First Baptist Church of Port Angeles, Wash., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Wednesday evening, July 6, when Miss Mabel Middleton, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bert Middleton of that city, became the bride of Mr. Ben. E. Burke, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Burke of Bremerton. Preceding the ceremony, which was read by the Rev. C. E. Haynes, Mrs. Fred Schlager sang "Because," accompanied by Mrs. George Wiltse.

To the strains of Lohengrin's "Bridal March" the bride entered the church with her father. She wore a bridal gown of white net over taffeta. Her veil of embroidered tulle was held to her head by a wreath of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and maidenhair fern. Miss Evelyn Middleton, as maid of honor, wore powder blue lace and carried a bouquet of Ophelia roses and sweet peas. Miss Beth Guy, bridesmaid, was in maize embroidered organdy and carried a bouquet of roses and sweet peas. Miss Winnie Middleton wore pink embroidered organdy and carried roses and sweet peas.

The groom was attended by Mr. Dan S. McGrossan of Seattle. The ushers were Messrs. Donald McBean and Kermit Thompson.

As the bridal party left the church to the strains of Mendelssohn's "Wedding March," they were showered with rose petals from the balcony by a group of children. The church was beautifully decorated with baskets of spires, delphinium and roses. It was the handiwork of Mrs. J. S. Pegram, Mrs. Jack Loewen and Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Orr. Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. The house was beautifully decorated with summer flowers.

A buffet supper was served. The table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake, and Mrs. Pegram and Mrs. E. Middleton, Victoria, presided at the tea and coffee urns.

The bride's traveling costume was navy flat crepe. She wore a navy blue coat and a beige fox fur with beige accessories.

After August 1, Mr. and Mrs. Burke will be at home to friends at 315 South Cambrain Street, Bremerton.

Out-of-town guests were: Mrs. E. Middleton and Miss Nellie Patterson of Victoria, B.C.; Miss Charlotte McGrossan and Mr. Dan McGrossan of Seattle; Mr. and Mrs. A. T. Burke and sons, Carl and David, Mrs. Archie Reynolds, Miss Vita Edmonds of Bremerton; Mrs. A. J. Thompson, Mr. Kermit Thompson, Miss Helen Thompson of Dungeness.

Native Daughters Plan Excursion

A picnic under the auspices of the Grand Post of Native Daughters will be held on Sunday, July 24 at Newcastle Island. In order to arrange transportation, members of the local post are asked to telephone at once E 0619 or G 6765.

Small fish not wanted by the angler should be handled with wet hands, and when possible the hook should be gently removed when the fish is still in the water.

Summer Sickness

Mothers Tell How BABY'S OWN TABLETS Relieve Children's Distressing Troubles

"My baby was so bad with summer complaint that we despaired of saving her", writes Mrs. Hazel Allsed, Whitby, Ont. "A friend advised Dr. Williams' Baby's Own Tablets. After the third dose baby fell asleep. By noon the next day she took the usual bottle feeding".

"At the first sign of baby's peevishness or illness in the trying months of summer, I give him Baby's Own Tablets, and in a short time he is well, and smiling his thanks", writes Mrs. Alton Parcher, Glenalmond, Que.

"Baby's Own Tablets are wonderful for summer complaint", writes Mrs. Laura Wheeler, Indian Road Crescent, Toronto.

Letters Of Mimi

Fear and the Conquering of It; An Animal That Makes a Noise Combining a Growl, a Bark and a Scream; the "Song of the Prune," a Boy's Song; Impressions of Victoria.

Dear Marje:—Always I have wanted to conquer "fear." The fear of mice, thunder storms, of the dark and of life, and of death. There is too much bother about trying to overcome and stifle fear. Put it out of your mind, say psychologists, think constructively rather than negatively, and psychoanalysts have a formula for extracting fear or any other negative quality that you happen to possess, and replacing it with one you would choose.

Fear, we are told, is responsible for much of the misery that goes on in the world. I can, of course, see where fear in its most serious aspect is deplorable, but fear of inconsequent things such as the average and normal persons experiences may have a beneficial effect, for it acts as a mild stimulant to the mind. However, because we are supposed to conquer it I have tried, and my effort at doing so is an unconvincing affair and is apt to take place after the following manner.

Question—asked commiseratingly by superior judgment: "But seriously, can you truthfully say you are afraid of burglars?"

Self: "Yes."

Question: "But why are you afraid of them."

Self: "I can't say definitely, but you can't trust them, and I certainly don't like their tactics."

Question: "What do you mean?"

Self: "They carry guns, and sometimes shoot their victims."

Question: "Well face facts. What percentages of the people you know have ever been shot by a burglar"

Self: "None."

Question: "Well then, do be sensible. Doesn't that prove the thing is rediculous and the probability of your ever being shot very remote?"

Self: "That sort of argument doesn't help."

Question: "Very well, in the event of the worst possible happening, what difference would it make if you were shot or killed?"

Self: "According to formula as set down one is supposed to be able to answer quite truthfully, after facing the situation and reducing the thing to plain common sense. 'None.' At the same time in the back of one's mind remains the unshakable, unconquerable conviction that it would matter tremendously—to oneself."

MIDNIGHT BOGEY

The other night in the middle of the night, something after the style of the foregoing took place, but the offending "bogey" was a noise. Now an unexplained noise in the night is the signal for a nervous person to start conjecturing and picturing all sorts of blood-curdling and morbibly fascinating results. I contend that the nerveless and phelgmatic persons who sleeps through every noise misses a lot in the way of developing a powerful imagination. Only those who are nervous know how powerful it may become.

This noise as I described it next day to the householders was a mixture of a bark and a scream, in about equal parts. But a new ingredient was added by the maid (who had, bless her, heard it as well) and the recognized in the sound a sort of growl. Now in that household of perhaps, eight or ten souls, we are the only two who experienced any sort of adventure that night. We embodied that noise in all sorts of weird and fantastic shapes and enacted in our minds diverse dramas, tragic and colorful, the more so because in the country the doors and windows are left open and marauders of any kind could make an easy entrance. So if you were born nervous and havn't overcome it, stop trying and glean some pleasure from the adventuring of your mind. Perhaps in the end by accepting it in this spirit, one would more quickly accomplish getting to sleep, than by trying to counteract the feeling with extraneous thoughts of courage.

We had been listening to a repeated and uninterrupted rendition (with words' to "The Song of the Prune," for what seemed an interminably long time. Finally (the performer) a boy of twelve swung around from the piano and said: "Now that's a song I like. It's got a good tune and it's funny. I wouldn't sing the mushy songs they write these days. Listen to the titles of these." And he started sorting over a pile of gramophone records. "Don't they make you sick? Ugh."

And it struck me that popular songs meet the requirements of the times. During the war our songs were spirited and lighthearted. For instance, "Pack Up Your Troubles" and "Tipperary" would give courage to many a faint heart. Following this period, jazz reigned supreme and fitted well into the extravagant gay days of the years before the 1930. To-day it can't be denied that our songs are very sentimental, but sentiment, taboo since the war, is again being accepted as a worthy quality.

SUCH IS VICTORIA

Impressions of Victoria. Pipe smoking men; dogs on leashes; athletic looking middle-aged and older men; walking sticks, bicycles; happy looking old people; cars of ancient vintage, well looked after; a city where one still sees horses on delivery wagons; rocks; rock gardens; Anglo-Saxon faces; Englishman of the pompous, redfaced, and of the gaunt emaciated type; a city, where perhaps more than any other in the country, men know how to enjoy life; gentility; few smart women, but a number of distinguished looking women; boulevards planted in trees, which are kept trimmed too low; greenness and verdant growth; happy expressions, and beautiful children.

SOCIAL, PERSONAL AND HOME INTERESTS

Former Society Leader's New Job

London, July 20 (By Canadian Press).—Once a leader in society, the Hon. Mrs. Swainston Strangways, widow of the Hon. Norman Swainston Strangways, a cousin of the Earl of Ilchester, has found happiness in the little village of Babbacombe, near Torquay, in England, tending boats for hire and mending the nets of fishermen.

Few of the summer visitors who respond to her urging to "have a trip round the bay," guess that the charming middle-aged woman clad in a rough blue serge costume, a white polo jumper, and a faded yachting cap once adorned fashionable salons. "Old Sam" Badcoott is her business partner. He does the sailing of the little craft while Mrs. Swainston Strangways does the "touting" on the beach. She came to the village to rest after four years of nursing during the war, and she was captivated by the simplicity of her neighbors.

About 140,000,000 tons of coal are burned annually in England.

"ALIMONY CLUB" HUSBANDS SEEK WORK

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 20.—Wives of seventeen "Alimony Club" husbands were exceedingly kind and, consequently, the seventeen husbands are no longer serving jail sentences for failure to pay alimony. They are now out looking for jobs. The wives took the gamble that their husbands, on finding work, would start making alimony payments regularly. While their husbands were in jail the wives received 60 cents a day from the county.

Would Centralize Civic And Private Relief Work

Representative Conference to Consider Whole Problem of Welfare Administration

Initial steps towards the centralization of all civic relief and social services, and of all the voluntary agencies of the Greater Victoria district into an all-embracing social welfare agency, were launched at a well-attended luncheon meeting held in Spencer's yesterday at noon under the auspices of the special survey committee under the chairmanship of F. E. Winslow. Miss Charlotte Whitton of Ottawa was the chief speaker, and about 100 were present.

The whole project will be thoroughly discussed at a special conference to be held in the near future at which representatives of all the public and private agencies concerned with the administration of social welfare will be present.

VICTORIA COMPARATIVELY FORTUNATE

Miss Whitton, after an exhaustive review of the conditions existing throughout Canada, observed that Victoria was one of the few communities which showed any decrease in the percentage of families requiring assistance this year as compared with last. Some communities showed as high as 47 per cent of the population on relief, the middle west being the greatest sufferer in this regard.

The situation had developed itself into three groups of people resting on the social structure of Canada for support. In the first group were the unemployed, who through circumstances over which they had no control, had been displaced from their ordinary occupation, but who, when conditions improved would be able to resume their former independence.

In the second group were those who had been permanently displaced from employment through the increasing use of labor-saving devices. In this connection Miss Whitton cited the 4,000 telephone girls who had been thrown out of employment between Windsor and Montreal by the installation of the dial telephone. In the third group were the unemployable, including families where there is no wage-earner or some other handicap which would necessitate such a family always receiving the assistance of a social welfare agency.

The speaker warned the gathering of the grave danger of thinking of the present condition of affairs in the trite phrase of "the depression" or "the unemployed." Those who were suffering from the temporary breakdown of the social and economic structure must not be looked upon in the mass as unemployed, but as so many individuals on whom the economic conditions have made tremendous impact, "as it would have made on us if our props had been withdrawn from beneath us and we saw out resources gradually disappearing, through no fault of our own."

NEED OF "HUMANITY"

To this end she pleaded that assistance must not be given to these unfortunate people by "rushing them through a mass line of treatment, or something would be destroyed which could never be replaced, the loss of which would make Canada the poorer." To safeguard this, there must be a better co-ordination of the major public and private welfare efforts with a view to more individual treatment of the unemployed and social maladjustments. She called upon all the various agencies to merge their differences and sink their identities and see their work in terms of human needs and human values.

"If we can forget all our differences of viewpoint, do away with pride in the past and assurance of skill in the present, over-leap misunderstanding, and in their place substitute the one word 'humanity,' we shall be able to organize both private and public charity, pull together all this fine reservoir of service, and bring through to independent citizenship those individuals who at the present time are facing circumstances over which they have no control," she concluded.

BISHOP'S MOTION

Bishop Schofield crystallized the feeling of the meeting in the following resolution, which was passed unanimously:

"In view of the increasing burden of responsibility that must be assumed by the public authority in the relief of need and destitution, it is most desirable that the civic authority should have made provision for direct administration of that part of the relief of families and individuals for which it accepts the financial obligation, but it is suggested that this assumption of administrative responsibility should extend further and include (in addition to such services to the ordinarily employed, now unemployable, to mothers' allowances, child welfare and similar services) those families and individuals for whom the city permanently assumes responsibility, in the ordinary course of events, under the Municipal Act.

"This would obviate divided service in the administration of the city's funds for the relief of the poor, sick and destitute, and also such occurrences as two different sets of applications, inspectors, etc., for the same individual or families, to whom the city relief may be giving one part of their aid and one of the private agencies another. It is urged that all civic relief, like the civic financial responsibility, should flow through the city's own office.

WANT ONLY ONE AGENCY

"Turning to the whole field of supplementary assistance and the more important one of case service to individuals in families in distress, the same principle is urged, and it is recommended that the civic authorities, having centralized their own relief and social services, should appeal to all the voluntary effort of the city and area of Greater Victoria, more especially to the Friendly Help, the Social Service League, and the Citizens' Relief Committee, to bend their efforts to the creation of one vigorous, all-inclusive social welfare agency for the area of Greater Victoria, which would undertake responsibility for the social planning with individuals and families and for the assurance of well-rounded service to each, the civic authority and the private agencies collaborating by frequent conference in mutual efforts to assure this result.

"That in the event of such a private agency being formed, the existing staff of the private agencies should be absorbed where possible, but that the whole co-operating private agency be placed under one competent director, who would work as closely as possible with the civic relief authorities.

MUNICIPAL GRANTS

"And that, if this agreement can be reached, civic authorities of Victoria and the suburban area contiguous thereto be asked to recognize this corporate, voluntary agency as the co-operating social case work and friendly help agency, for all their work involving social adjustments, and grant a reasonable proportion of aid to it, commensurate with what it can raise from private funds.

"And that the Friendly Help, Social Service League, the Citizens' Relief Committee, be each asked to appoint two representatives to an informal conference to discuss this whole project, and that the mayor and the city relief officer of Victoria, the chairman and one other member of the survey committee, and the reeve and one other representative of each of the Oak Bay, Esquimalt, and Saanich municipalities, and a representative of the Provincial Government be also invited to participate in such a conference."

Mayor Leeming, in moving the vote of thanks to Miss Whitton for her able address, took occasion to express the view that the civic relief administration was in most capable hands.

SISTER MARY'S KITCHEN

Meat loaves are ideal summer dishes, so I am giving two recipes that are interesting and savory.

The jellied veal loaf is worth trying for it is economical and delicious.

Jellied Veal Loaf

One shin and knuckle of veal, 1 large onion, 1 cup celery tops, 4 hard cooked eggs, 2 teaspoons salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, 4 tablespoons minced parsley.

Wash meat well and put into a large kettle with celery tops, onion peeled but not sliced and boiling water to cover. Simmer until tender. Remove meat from stock and boil stock until reduced to one cup. Pick meat from bones and chop finely. Line a mold with slices of hard cooked egg, dipping each slice in minced pasley. Add half the chopped veal. Sprinkle with parsley, salt and pepper. Add a layer of sliced egg and another sprinkling of parsley. Cover with remaining meat and season with salt, pepper and parsley. Pour over strained stock and cover with a plate. Weight lightly and let stand in the refrigerator over night to chill and become firm. When wanted to serve unmold and garnish with radish roses and sprigs of parsley.

Baked Veal Loaf

One ond one-half pounds lean veal, 3 slices fat pork, 1 egg, 1 egg yolk, ½ cup cracker crumbs, ½ cup milk, 1 teaspoon minced parsley, 2 teaspoons grated lemon rind, ½ teaspoon powdered thyme, ½ teaspoon salt, ¼ teaspoon pepper, ⅛ teaspoon ground nutmeg.

Put veal and two slices of salt pork through food chopper. Beat egg and egg yolk until light. Add seasonings and cracker crumbs to meat and mix thoroughly. Add beaten egg and milk, mix and shape into a loaf. Put into a baking pan and lay a slice of salt pork over the top. Bake two hours in a moderate oven, basting with hot water and the juices in the pan.

LIME WATER NO LONGER USED IN MILK FORMULAS

Twenty or more years ago lime water was used invariably as an ingredient of what were then called "modified milk formulas." The lime water was used to counteract the excessive acidity of the cows' milk and to help break down the curds of cows' milk which were so much together and more indigestible than breast milk curds.

BETTER METHODS

The use of lime water has been abandoned because there are better and cleaner ways of accomplishing this same end. Boiling or pasteurizing the milk renders the milk curds easier to digest, and neither process tends to check digestion as the lime water does. We must remember that digestion begins when the food is mixed with the acid digestive juices and is thoroughly acidified. Then and then only the food begins its journey from the stomach into the small intestine.

A DIFFERENT ROLE

There used to be a rather general idea that the lime water was put into the formula to promote the growth of teeth and help the solidity of the bones. This was not the role of lime water. Only limited quantities of inorganic minerals are absorbed by the body. The cows' milk itself is exceedingly rich in lime, and with other foods supplies the bones and teeth. In the wintertime we add cod liver oil to the diet, so that its vitamin D content, supplied in summer by sunshine, will encourage the body to make the very best use of the minerals supplied in the diet.

The well-fed baby receives through his diet every element necessary for the growth and development of his body. There is no need to depend upon artificial sources for the essential minerals when the diet itself is rich in them. Milk, whole grain cereals, egg yolk, vegetables, fruit juices and cooked fruits provide the minerals in appetizing, usable form.

ITS USES

Lime water has its uses. The child suffering from an excessively acid urine may be temporarily helped by doses of lime water or bi-carbonate of soda water while the mother makes those corrections in the whole diet which have brought about the condition.

Lime water mixed with linseed oil (called carron oil) is an excellent application for burns. Lime water may also be used when the child has hives, in order to help their speedy disappearance.

But lime water in formulas is outmoded. Its mineral role is better played by milk itself, which is rendered digestible to even the tinest infant by moderate or thorough boiling.

Copper Magnate's Widow Marries

London, July 20 (Associated Press).—Mrs. Marcus Daly, thirty-three, widow of the copper magnate, was married to-day at the Prince's Row registry office to George John Djamgaroff, a newspaperman. Among the guests was the Grand Duchess Cyril of Russia, who signed the register.

Summery Dresses

Summer has only one disadvantage — summer clothes get dirty quickly. That means, if you would be fresh and smart in appearance, it is essential to have a pretty good wardrobe. We can help you there —just send along your summer dresses — some of those you thought you could never use again—and let us restore their use and freshness. Phone us to-day.

Horoscope

THURSDAY, JUNE 21, 1932

According to astrology this is rather an uncertain day. Adverse planetary aspects appear to dominate.

In the morning there may be an inclination to find fault with life and its varied interests. The spirit of discontent should be banished, or the day will bring naught that is best.

There is a planetary influence to-day that encourages deception and double-dealing. Tendencies toward sinister policies may be active and be overcome.

The seers emphasize the old saying that "two wrongs do not make one right," and urge careful discipline of thought as well as action.

While this configuration prevails there may be much unfavorable propaganda disseminated, for the average mind is supposed to be open to what is of evil portent rather than what is of fair promise.

This is not an auspicious sway under which to seek employment. Men will not be able to sell brains or brawn unless they radiate faith in themselves.

New York, under the rays of Jupiter, will focus national attention and will benefit greatly in the coming months, it is foretold.

As the year advances Mars is seen as powerful in influence. In Europe occultists prophesy that Armageddon is not far off, or at least within the life span of the younger generation.

Persons whose birthdate it is have the augury of a year of small vexations that may be easily overcome. Average prosperity is indicated.

Medicine—Not Shows Attracts Stars

By ROBERT GRANDON

Red-haired, green-eyed, a thing to look upon without pain, Myrna Loy met me on the street the other day . . . a large, professional-looking tome tucked away beneath her arm.

"Surely, not an unabridged dictionary" I remarked. "Let's see, Dante's Inferno? . . . No? . . . Rabelais? Heaven forefend; Ah, what is it?"

"Bob, you silly," Myrna answered laughingly, "It's a book on medicine. I'm studying . . . and believe me, it's no press agent's story either. I'm going to be a doctor when my years of studio life are over."

Which is not at all surprising, if you know Myrna Loy. She's a most businesslike young woman, decidedly with a mind of her own, and always has had a yen for medicine. It sort of runs in the family. With a doctor such as Myrna, who would want to get well?

Quite a few of Hollywood's own started out in the line of medicine . . . Sidney Fox was one. She went in for medicine in a big way, studying in the office of a friend of her father's until she developed the stage bug . . . and Richard Dix quit Northwestern University up in Minnesota after he had studied the materia medica for some time.

Dick Travers graduated from McGill University in Montreal and was a sure-enough practitioner before he started the career that led him to old Essanay as a beginning . . . Jack (Man-About-Town) Luden learned his physic at Johns-Hopkins, and Hal Wilson at the College of the City of New York . . . Bruce Gordon attended lectures at St. Johns in dear ole Lunnon . . . and Hector V. Sarno can still write a mean prescription if the emergency arises.

Quite an array of medical talent about the studios . . . Wonder if any of them will turn to practicing in the days to come What a flapper trade the boys should have if only they do.

Port Alberni Man Sent Two Bales Away; Got Bill Instead of Cheque

Port Alberni, July 20.—A local farmer declares that farming is a luxury for the wealthy only. A short time ago, he states, he forwarded two bales of wool to the brokers to be washed, combed and sold. Instead of receiving a cheque, he received a bill for $3.80.

BEDTIME STORY

Uncle Wiggily's Roller Skate

(By HOWARD R. GARIS)

The day after Uncle Wiggily and Jingle had the adventure with the disappointed Bob Cat and the jumbles, the rabbit gentleman had another with a roller skate. I mean he had another adventure, not another jumble. Though he also had some of those funny cookies with holes in the centre that Jingle held over her face to pretend she had owl eyes and so scared the Bob Cat.

It happened this way. Uncle Wiggily was sitting in the front yard of his hollow stump bungalow early in the morning. The sun was shining and tickling his pink nose when, all of a sudden, Billie Wagtail, the goat boy, came prancing along.

"Hello, Uncle Wiggily," bleated Billie, for he had to bleat to talk.

"Hello, Billie," said the rabbit gentleman. "Where are you going?"

"I was coming to see you," went on the goat boy, who had a funny little tail that went wig-wag just like a gold fish playing marbles.

"Did you want to see me about anything special?" asked the rabbit gentleman, smiling kindly at Billie.

"I wanted to see if you would buy this," bleated the goat boy, as he held out in one paw a roller skate.

"You mean you want me to buy that old roller skate?" asked Uncle Wiggily, for, truth to tell, the skate was old and battered and bent where it had bumped into the curbstone many and many a time.

"Yes, I'd like for you to buy my roller skate," said Billie.

"Where is the other one?" asked Uncle Wiggily.

"The other what?" said the goat boy. "The other roller skate," Uncle Wiggily made answer.

"Oh, there isn't but just this one," and Billie laughed.

"Only one roller skate!" exclaimed Mr. Longears. "Why, how could you ride along on one roller skate, Billie?"

'Oh, it can be done," bleated the goat boy. "You sort of push yourself along with the other foot. Would you like to buy this one roller skate? It's for the left paw," he added, "and that's the best."

"Did you only have one skate, ever?" asked the rabbit.

"Oh, no, once I had two," said Billie. "But the other busted — I mean it broke—and I have only this one left. So if you'd like to buy it from me I'd take the money you gave me and I'd buy something else."

"What?" asked the rabbit.

"Well," said the goat boy, twiddling his funny little tail, "I'd buy me a baseball. We fellows are getting up a nine."

"But what could I do with just one roller skate?" asked the rabbit.

"You could strap it on your left paw and push yourself with your right paw and you'd go along almost as well as if you had two roller skates," said Billie. "Please buy this so I can get a baseball."

"Please buy this"

"Oh, all right," agreed Uncle Wiggily. "How much?"

"Would a quarter be too much?" asked Billie. "I can get a dandy baseball for a quarter."

"Well, green a quarter for one roller skate wouldn't be too much," said Uncle Wiggily. "Here you are! So he bought the old, battered, bent and rusty skate and gave the little goat boy a quarter. That's twenty-five cents, you know.

"Hurray!" cried Billie, as he trotted away to buy a baseball.

Uncle Wiggily twinkled his pink nose and looked at the one roller skate he had bought.

"What can I do with it?" he murmured. "I think I am too old to glide about on one skate. Even a pair would be too much for me. But now that I have this roller skate I ought to find some use for it. I'll take it along with me as I hop around looking for adventures."

So, putting a piece of string on the roller skate, Uncle Wiggily slung it over his shoulder like a Boy Scout's water flask and away he hopped over the fields and through the woods.

Uncle Wiggily was rather worried. He knew if his wife and Nurse Jane found out he had bought one old, battered, bent and rusted roller skate they would laugh at him. They would say it was no good and that Billie shouldn't have sold it.

"But perhaps something wonderful may happen," said Uncle Wiggily. "Perhaps this roller skate may help me to find a strange adventure."

So he hopped on and on and, all of a sudden, he heard a noise in the bushes and he stopped, his pink nose twinkling, while the roller skate jiggled and its wheels rattled.

What happened next must be kept for the story after this. Then, if the water pistol doesn't shoot the gold fish in the eye with a baked bean lollypop, I'll tell you next about Uncle Wiggily's funny ride.

LEAP YEAR BRIDE

by Laura Lou BROOKMAN

The dishes were waiting, stacked on the shelf that served as a kitchen table. Cherry drew a pan of steaming, sudsy water and began to ply the dish mop.

After the dishes were washed and put away she began energetically to clean the living-room. She worked as though getting that room clean were the one important thing in the world. It wasn't of course. No matter how hard Cherry worked it was the cheque of which she was thinking. Those two persistent voices, the one arguing that she should keep it, the other that she should send it back, continued their dual.

She finished with the living-room. She collected the laundry and put it out for the driver. Just before one o'clock when she was about to sit down to a frugal lunch Cherry went to the chest and got out her mother's letter.

She took paper and pen and ink and sat down at the table. Five minutes later she folded the cheque inside the note she had written and sealed them both in an envelope. She addressed it to Mrs. Sarah O'Fallon and finished it with a stamp.

"There!" the girl sighed aloud. "It's settled!"

She was so eager to have the whole thing off her mind that, without waiting to eat, she slipped on her hat and coat and walked to the corner postbox.

Another week and it would be June. The sky was deep sapphire to-day, the clouds like down. Sunshine shimmered back from window panes and the white pavement. Cherry walked slowly, enjoying the fresh air.

She had dropped the letter into the box and started back up the street when a noisy police ambulance passed. A minute later Cherry caught her breath. The ambulance had halted in front of her home!

The girl walked faster. The ambulance was backed to the door now. Two men entered the house and a woman came out the door.

Cherry began to run. "What is it?" she asked the man in the driver's seat. "What's happened?"

"Don't know, ma'am. Emergency call."

A group of youngsters, attracted by the noise of the ambulance, formed an inquisitive semi-circle on the sidewalk. Cherry rushed up the steps. The woman by the door was another tenant whom she had seen but never before spoken to.

"What's happened?" the girl asked.

"It's Miss Jamieson," the other told her. "She has that little room on the top floor.. Took some kind of poison."

"Oh, how terrible!"

"It'll be a mercy if she doesn't live," Cherry's informant continued sombrely. "She's been out of work. Hasn't paid her rent for three weeks. That's why the janitor happened to go upstairs and knock at her door. Believe me, I know what it's like to be out of work with no friends!"

The door opened and the two women stepped aside. Two men bearing a stretcher came out. There was a figure on the stretcher, entirely covered except for the pale face with its frame of dark hair. The eyes were closed but the face was contorted as though from pain.

Instinctively Cherry drew back. The crowd of watchers on the sidewalk had increased. Cherry wanted to tell them to go away. That poor girl—surely in her suffering she was entitled to privacy! They were taking her to a hospital to try to save her life. Would she live? If the doctors succeeded would she be grateful to them?

"It's — so terrible," Cherry said brokenly. "Let's go inside."

The other woman followed her. Mr. Bergman, the janitor, stood in the entrance hall. "Well, it's too bad," he said. "It's a bad thing to have happen in an apartment. I hope they won't get a lot of rumors started—"

"Do you think she'll get well?" Cherry asked.

Mr. Bergman inclined his head sceptically. "Who knows? She ain't been eating much for a long time I guess. The doctor said she had a chance. That's all. She hasn't looked so well for a couple of months.

"Hasn't she any friends? Isn't there anyone at all to help her?"

The janitor shook his head. "Not since she's been here," he said. "I've never seen her with anyone. The note she left said there wasn't anyone to notify."

"But it doesn't seem right—!" Cherry began.

The other woman put her hand on the girl's arm. "They'll do everything that can be done for her at the hospital," she said. "It's charity cases like this one and rich folks that get the best care. They'll save her if there's any way to do it."

They were right, of course. There was nothing for Cherry to do but go upstairs to her own apartment. Lunch was waiting there but she knew she could not eat.

"This is where you live, isn't it?" the other woman said when they had reached the second floor landing. "You'd better lie down for a while. Look sort of worn out. Would you like me to bring you a cup of tea?"

Cherry thanked her but refused. The woman said she was Mrs. Moreau and lived on the third floor. Cherry promised to come up to see her some afternoon.

The apartment had never seemed such a refuge. Cherry entered, closing the door behind her. The familiar room with its bright colors and comfortable furnishings had never looked so attractive. Oh, why had she and Dan considered themselves poor! They were young. They had health. They had each other.

Throughout the afternoon Cherry was unable to rid herself of the memory of Miss Jamieson's white face. At four o'clock she went downstairs to ask the janitor's wife if there had been any report from the hospital.

"If she lives through the night,' Mrs. Bergman told her, "they say she'll get well. The poor girl! Yes, it's too bad —too bad—!"

There was nothing to be gained for Miss Jamieson or anyone else by standing there and discussing what had happened. Cherry went back to the second floor.

Dinner was ready, waiting to be put on the table when Dan arrived at six o'clock. Cherry heard him whistling in the hall and ran to open the door.

"Hello, darling—" she began, but the words died on her lips.

Dan Phillips entered, his face alight with excitement. "Hello, Cherry. Wait till you see what I've got for you!" he exclaimed.

Dan grinned down at her. "I'll give you three guesses," he announced. "What do you think I have?"

"Is it something for me?" Cherry asked.

"Yes."

"But I haven't the slightest idea!"

"You can guess, can't you?" Dan insisted. "What would you think it's likely to be—a Rolls-Royce or the crown jewels of England or—"

A faint cry, plaintive and high-pitched, interrupted him. It came from Dan's coat pocket. It was repeated, this time louder. An unmistakably kittenish "Meow!"

"A kitten! Oh, let me see it!" Cherry cried. "Where did you get it, Dan? Oh, you little darling, you—!"

This last was addressed to the wriggling ball of gray fur that had emerged from Dan's pocket. The kitten, balancing in Dan's two hands, looked about on this new world in which it found itself and emitted another "Meow!"

"Cute, isn't it?" Phillips asked.

Cherry had taken the kitten and was holding it nestled against her shoulder. The warm, soft fur touched her cheek. The girl's eyes were bright as a child's.

"It's adorable!" she told him. "Did you know I've always wanted a kitten? That's another thing I could never have at home. But where did you get it? Can we really keep it?"

"We can, if you want to. I stopped at the drug store on the corner for cigarettes. There were four of these little fellows there with their mother. One was black and the others were sort of gray striped. I thought this one was the cutest and the man said he'd be glad to give it to us. It's not quite a month old yet."

The kitten seemed eminently contended with its perch on Cherry's shoulder. It was purring now—a miniature sing-song that could barely be heard.

"Do you hear it?" Cherry demanded. "It's singing. Oh, of course we'll keep it! And it was sweet of you to bring it, Dan." She began to laugh. The kitten had raised one velvety paw and with experimental gestures was investigating Cherry's ear.

"Put it down," Dan suggested. "Let's see what it thinks of the place."

Cherry set the kitten on the floor. It was completely gray except for a white line down the centre of its forehead, rounding out in a symmetrical arc of white about its nose and mouth. As though aware of their scrutiny the little animal backed slowly away from Cherry and Dan, stopped and gazed up at them.

"Well, I'll be darned!" laughed Dan. "Would you look at the little beggar giving us the once over?"

Cherry was down on her knees beside the kitten again. "I know what I'm going to call it," she announced. "Did you ever see anything so pink as that nose? I'm going to call it 'Pinky'."

"That's a swell name for a gray cat!"

"Why, I think it's a grand name—and anyhow that's what it's going to be."

Their own meal was forgotten in their interest in the new pet. Presently, however, the kitten was left curled up on a pillow on the floor and Cherry and Dan sat down to dinner.

Dan broke a roll and buttered it. "Well, he said. "I had a piece of welcome news to-day."

"What was it?"

"Your husband, Madam, is the winner of the $5 bonus for the best-written news story of the week."

"Oh, Dan, I'm glad!"

"So'm I. That five bucks will help out considerably in our financial status. But that's not all. Two of the fellows who have been owing me for the last six months kicked in with $12 more. I'd forgotten about both of them! Yes, it looks as though we can pay our bills and stay out of debtors' prison after all. My cheque Saturday will pay the rent for another month and this $17 will carry us over the week."

"It's worked out wonderfully, hasn't it?" Cherry asked. She said it so fervently that the young man across the table looked up.

"I—had some news to-day too," the girl went on. She told Dan about the cheque from her mother and about sending it back. When she had finished Dan leaned across the table and took her hand. His eyes were troubled.

"You're sure you wanted to do that?" he asked. "Of course I couldn't have let you spend any of that money for our living expenses or for me but you might have bought something for yourself. Clothes maybe. Or—whatever girls buy."

Cherry laughed. "Of course not, silly. What could I be wanting? Oh, Dan, you and I have so much! We ought to be so thankful—!"

She told him about Miss Jamieson who had lived on the top floor and was now at the City Hospital. The recital of the story sobered both of them. For some time after the meal had ended they sat in silence.

All at once Cherry cried out. "It's the kitten! It must be hungry!"

Little Pinky's front paws pressing against her ankle had startled the girl. She filled a saucer with milk but the kitten was not interested. Try as they would they could not make Pinky drink until Dan filled a teaspoon and poured it down the kitten's throat. Pinky coughed, licked the milk from his whiskers and decided to try a gulp for himself.

The kitten's antics kept them amused most of the evening. It chased paper balls attached to a string. It climbed into boxes and out of them and once, when Dan threw down a newspaper, the kitten crawled under it and had what must have been the most exciting adventure of its brief life getting out.

"It's going to be company for me when I am alone," Cherry said. "I don't see how I'll ever have a dull moment with that little rascal around."

"You will probably wish that little rascal was 100 miles away a good many times."

The girl was sure that she would not. The kitten finally went to sleep in her lap and Cherry transferred it to its pillow so gently that it did not awaken.

It had been an eventful day. She and Dan sat in the window seat and looked out on the night. Moonlight streamed over the patch of ground below that by day was nothing more than a weed-grown space where laundry flapped in the breeze. To-night it might have been a garden. Ugly buildings took on grace from the black shadows. The faint scent of plum blossoms came from a tree across the alley.

Cherry put up a hand and touched Dan's cheek. "We've so much to be thankful for," she whispered.

It was the middle of the next morning and Cherry was frowning over the cookbook when there was a knock at the door. She arose and opened it.

"Oh—good morning!" Cherry said. "Won't you come in?"

Demand Education Costs Be Slashed

Public Meeting Called By Victoria Ratepayers' Association Favors Special Tax

Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe Talks on School Costs at Yesterday's Meeting

Reduction by one-half in the cost of education, assumption by the Provincial Government of sole responsibility for schools, with replacement of land taxes by a system of direct taxation of wide scope, was indorsed by a public meeting held yesterday evening at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, under the auspices of the Victoria Ratepayers' Association. When Frank Higgins, K.C., the chairman, called for a vote, only one voice among the 250 men and women present registered opposition.

The resolution was sponsored by W. C. Warner and E. B. Andros and was as follows:

Be it resolved:

"1. That the cost of education throughout the province should be immediately reduced by at least 50 per cent.

"2. That in the opinion of this meeting the responsibility for providing education is that of the province, and the Provincial Government should assume such responsibility and relieve the municipalities therefrom.

"3. That the cost of education should be removed from the land, and the same provided for by a special educational tax to belevied generally so that the burden of such taxation shall be more equitably distributed."

Hon. Joshua Hinchliffe, Minister of Education, the principal speaker, advocated a wider basis of taxation for education, stressing in his remarks the difficulty of reconciling the general demand for reduction in school costs with the reluctance of the people to do without the many valuable services now given by school boards.

Mr. Hinchliffe closed his remarks with announcement that a conference was being arranged between representatives of municipal councils and school boards, to endeavor to attain accord on matters affecting school taxation. He stated that if the conference proved abortive the Department of Education would be prepared to take drastic action, which would doubtless provoke criticism from both councils and school boards.

When opening his address Mr. Hinchliffe explained that he would limit his use of the term "education" to mean "schooling." There was much talk of "free education" but such was impossible, as someone had to pay for everything. The School Act declared that all children must go to school for a certain number of years and also set out that owners of real property had to pay for it. Mr. Hinchliffe reviewed the progress of school legislation from 1893, when it was required that children attend school for six months in the year until they were twelve. There had been no change in the field of taxation, despite the increased services now provided and the extension of compulsory tuition until children attain the age of fifteen.

ONLY LANDOWNERS PAY

The basic theory was that every person in the province should pay their just share of the cost of teaching children compelled to go to school. Mr. Hinchliffe praised that principle, but noted that in practice the cost of educating all children had been laid only on that section of the people possessing real estate. "The question is, how are we going to escape from this situation in which we find ourselves? I am told real estate can no longer bear these burdens and I believe this audience considers that statement to be correct. There is this corroboration, that more and more parcels of land are reverting to the province and municipalities.

"These reversions increase the burden on those persons hanging on to their lands, and the situation to-day is that many cannot pay the charges involved," he said.

HOW COSTS GROW

Mr. Hinchliffe said a part of the increased cost of education was due to a lack of "cost consciousness" on the part of the people. Demands for services had been growing, and he cited as an example the advance in the compulsory school age to the fifteenth birthday. There was more than one reason for this age being selected. One was, he believed, because a lad of fifteen could understand and choose a vocation, but even more important was the intent to prevent child labor and all its ill-effects. A third reason for setting the school leaving age at fifteen was to prevent parents from expecting to see their boys earning wages.

"I have no quarrel with the advance in the school leaving age from twelve to fifteen, but that extra tuition costs money and you have to pay for it," Mr. Hinchliffe said. He commented upon constant addition of courses to the school curriculum, such as manual training and domestic economy supplemented by physical training, medical, dental and optometrist services.

"The peculiar thing is, people denounce the cost of schools but will not permit reduction of services. If the addition of items to the curriculum has increased the cost of schooling, beyond what people can afford, is there any other way to reduce the cost of schooling than to take off some of those courses? I, personally, cannot see any other way," Mr. Hinchliffe said.

"Is there any way of increasing our revenue without taking more from land? In past years it may have been fair to place the cost of schools on land, but in these years, when many people own no land, taxing on land only is most unfair," he said.

Mr. Hinchliffe considered British Columbia had started off on the wrong course by providing compulsory education for all children instead of limiting free compulsory education to the children of taxpayers. He cited examples where school benefits had been provided children of well paid workmen who paid no taxes, while the schools serving such children were bankrupting the owners of the land.

Mr. Hinchliffe said it was only partially true to say the tenant paid the taxes through his rents. The house-owner had mortgaged his resources for the benefit of the community and if he did not pay his taxes he lost his property. Admitting the renter paid taxes in his rent, he had no such investment as the property owner and not a cent of his resources could be touched by the municipality, Mr. Hinchliffe said.

He pointed out that every cent collected for schools from other sources than land relieved local authorities of having to collect that much from land owners. He believed school boards had not adequately cultivated revenue sources available to them, such as fees and special taxes.

Mr. Hinchliffe said efforts were being made to bring school boards and councils into conference regarding school expenditures. He cited the power of school boards to establish technical schools or employ school dentists and demand from municipal councils the cost of such services. Such decisions, involving heavy taxation, and made without reference to the people or councils were objected to by municipal councils.

Mr. Hinchliffe hoped agreement would ensue from the conference being arranged, declaring: "If there is no amicable agreement the Department of Education will take action within five minutes," remarking that both councils and school boards would agree in protesting against interference by the government.

In conclusion, Mr. Hinchliffe said that, if it were found impossible to increase the revenues available for education, it was obvious that the services must be reduced to within the sums which taxes on land could provide.

ELIMINATE FREE HIGH SCHOOLS

Rounds of applause greeted reading by W. C. Warner of his remedial proposals. To attain reduction of school costs by one-half, Mr. Warner advocated total elimination of free high school education. He stated that, of a total cost of over $10,000,000 for education in British Columbia, over $2,000,000 was required for high school tuition. "We cannot afford to do it, when the province is cutting down its unemployment relief, we cannot afford $10,000,000 for education. Years ago we got swelled heads in education, but now we take smaller sizes in hats," he commented.

A system of direct taxing for education, which would levy on everybody, should replace the tax on land, he argued.

E. B. Andros seconded the resolution, asking "If a man can read, write and cipher, what more does he want? Let the government provide scholarships for the brilliant, whether sons of rich or poor. To-day 90 per cent of these youngsters are just putting in time," he asserted.

Mr. Andros also appealed to the audience to join the Victoria Ratepayers' Association and strengthen its representations to the city council.

FARM PROBLEMS

John Gibb of Duncan, president of the Taxpayers' Economy League of Vancouver Island, told of the incidence of taxation on primary producers. Farmers in Cowichan who used to get forty-five cents a pound for butterfat were now receiving eighteen cents. Over a term of years farmers had paid out 11.3 per cent of their gross earnings as taxes, 45 per cent of that levy being for schools. He declared that individual farmers to-day contributed 500 pounds of butterfat towards schools and taxes which, three years ago, only required them to provide 200 pounds of butterfat.

C. R. Drayton of Duncan said the people of Vancouver Island were not particularly interested in what had happened in the past. They wanted to know what was going to happen in the immediate future. If necessary to balance the budget, it might be advisable to eliminate taxes for schools entirely, he suggested.

D. O. Cameron was accorded rounds of applause when he stated that in Tennessee and Texas, states with great resources and revenues, and low debts compared to this province, schools had been closed to enable budgets to be balanced. More applause greeted his criticism of municipal and provincial pensions being granted employees who retired after long tenure of well-paid positions. He advised members of the government to get out among the people, when they would abandon their efforts to seek new means of taxing and undertake to cut expenditures until budgets balanced.

When calling for the vote on the resolution the chairman said the province should abandon the United States basis of financing education and adhere to the British system of limiting free education to primary studies.

GIVES REPORT OF ACTIVITIES

Victoria Ratepayers' Association Justified, Says President

The semi-annual report of the Victoria Ratepayers' Association, presented yesterday evening at a well-attended meeting at the Chamber of Commerce auditorium, showed much activity by the executive. Frank Higgins, K.C., president, read the report, which reviewed the successful blocking of the proposal to install electric traffic signals, told of the association's campaign before the Legislature to secure a vote on the $500,000 loan and recalled the request to the City Council that efforts be made to secure payment by Saanich of $84,000 now owing for the northwest sewer.

Mr. Higgins commented that the association's attitude towards the $500,000 bond issue had been justified by increases in taxation levied upon homes, many residents having found their taxes had been increased by as much as 5 per cent.

Efforts were being directed towards federation of all the taxpayers' associations of the province, with a view to united action to secure economy by public bodies.

The City Council's action in leasing the Gordon Head airport, after the ratepayers had decisively defeated purchase of the site, was condemned by E. B. Andros, who warned that before long the citizens would find they owned the acreage.

CONFERENCE TO BE BROADCAST

First Plenary Session Will Be on Air For Hour To-morrow

Canadians from Victoria to Sydney, Cape Breton will be able to join those in the galleries of the House of Commons at Ottawa in listening to the first plenary session of the Imperial Economic Conference. The radio broadcast will commence at 6.45 a.m., Victoria time, to-morrow, and will last about an hour. At 7 a.m. His Excellency the Governor-General of Canada will speak, delivering a message from His Majesty King George. He will be followed by the heads of several delegations. The programme will be picked up in the House of Commons by the Canadian National Railways communications and broadcast over a network of thirty-five Canadian stations linked by the lines of the Canadian National and Canadian Pacific Telegraphs. CFCT in Victoria will be added to the network on this occasion. The opening ceremonies will be broadcast over the networks of both the National and Columbia broadcasting systems, an indication of the great interest in the Imperial Conference among the people of the United States.

The dinner, which is being tendered by the government at the Chateau Laurier to the delegates and their advisers and assistants on Thursday evening, will be received over a national network of stations also, commencing at 8 p.m., Victoria time. This dinner will also be attended by the members of Parliament and the Senate, with their wives. The chairman will be the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, Prime Minister of Canada. Brief addresses will be given by many of the heads of delegations and by other important personages from Canada and other countries. "The dinner will be one of the largest ever held in Ottawa, the list of guests being in excess of six hundred.

The late Mr. Grice was born in England, coming to Canada fifty-eight years ago, and resident in Victoria for the last forty-three years, where he is survived by his widow and one son, William Norman, and a brother, Thomas. A son, Henry Clarence, resides in Los Angeles.
The remains repose at Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel, where the funeral service will be conducted on Thursday, July 21, at 2.30, the Rev. Dr. Unsworth officiating. Interment will be at Ross Bay Cemetery.

DIED

ERRINGTON—On Wednesday, July 20, 1932, at her home, 1421 Stadacona Avenue, Victoria, B.C., Kate Selby, wife of J. F. Errington, passed peacefully away after a lingering illness. She leaves to mourn her loss her husband, her daughter, Virtue, and a son, Charles.
The funeral will take place from Hayward's B.C. Funeral Co. Chapel at 1.45 on Friday, July 22, 1932, proceeding to St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, where the Rev. Canon Nunns will conduct the service at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in the Royal Oak Burial Park.

DEADLOCK ON HEAVY GUNS

Associated Press

Geneva, July 20—The big four powers of the world disarmament conference, Great Britain, France, the United States and Italy, met to-day in another attempt to break the deadlock on the question of abolition of heavy mobile artillery which has prevented the adoption of a resolution to adjourn.

British and French representatives favored reduction of heavy naval guns, while the United States delegation was holding out for abolition of the heavy mobile land artillery.

The adjournment resolution, without any provision for this last obstacle, was published and will be submitted late this afternoon to the general commission on disarmament.

As drawn by Sir John Simon and Premier Benes of Czechoslovakia and approved by the delegations of the four powers, the declaration has five divisions:

The first asserts that the conference decides, "guided by the general principles underlying President Hoover's disarmament declaration, (a) that a substantial reduction in world armaments shall be effected, to be applied by a general convention alike to land and naval armaments, and (b) that the primary objectives shall be to reduce means of attack."

Division two, lists the points on which the conference, in concluding its first phase, notes an agreement. These are: Prohibition of air attacks against civilian populations; abolition of all aerial bombardment, subject to certain reservations, which include regulation of civil aircraft with full publicity; limitation of maximum tonnage of tanks and prohibition of chemical, bacteriological and incendiary warfare.

A third division, stipulating that the conference bureau shall continue work during the adjournment, prepares for the second phase of the conference.

The text says: "The questions which will form the subject of such examination by the conference bureau are the following:

"1. Effectives. A strict limitation and real reduction of effectives shall be brought about."

Budget limitations and the trade and manufacture of arms are other matters which the bureau will examine. The conference asks that the naval powers conduct negotiations concerning naval reductions during the adjournment.

A fourth division reads: "The present resolution in no way prejudges the attitude of the conferences toward any more comprehensive measures of disarmament, or toward political proposals submitted by the various delegations."

This keeps alive the issue of the German equality in the right to arm, and the French demand for security.

A final division recommends that the governments renew for four months the present armaments truce.

MINISTER OF ALBERTA DIES

Hon. V. W. Smith, Minister of Railways and Telephones, Passes Suddenly

Was Engaged in Construction of E. and N. Railway Here

Canadian Press

Edmonton, July 20.—Hon. V. W. Smith, Minister of Railways and Telephones in the Alberta government, dropped dead yesterday in front of his home here at 6.30 p.m. He was leaving his residence for a holiday when he succumbed to a fatal heart attack.

Carrying an armful of implements for his summer home at Pigeon Lake, Alta., Mr. Smith was within a yard of his automobile when stricken. A doctor was called immediately by a neighbor, but the minister died in a few minutes. He had suffered angina pectoris for some years and the doctor declared excitement, caused by a haste in his departure for his summer home, caused a stroke.

Death of Mr. Smith came just before new honors were accorded him, a statement by Premier J. E. Brownlee revealed.

"I had asked him to accept the portfolio of Provincial Secretary and that of Minister of Industries," the Premier said, "and his appointment would have followed very shortly.

"It was a tremendous shock," the Premier added. "He was a very, very wise counsellor and an extremely able business man."

Premier Brownlee had spent most of the afternoon in the company of the late minister, discussing details of administration prior to Mr. Smith's intended departure to join his family at Pigeon Lake for a two-week holiday.

WORKED ON ISLAND

Born at Pownal, Prince Edward Island, in 1866, Mr. Smith came west in 1883. Then next year he taught school at Oak Point, Alta., and a year later he joined Earle and McLennan in the construction of the E. and N. Railway. Three years later he left Vancouver Island, but continued in railway construction work in Washington and British Columbia until 1915, when he went to Camrose, Alta., where he started farming.

In 1921 he entered Alberta political life and captured the Camrose seat for the United Farmers when that party took over the reins of government in Alberta.

Boston Heir Is Missing

Long Beach, Cal., July 20.—Possibility that Allan Bradford Monks, Boston heir, may be dead or held prisoner was expressed by police here to-day after two days of fruitless effort to locate him.

Monks is sought on a warrant which accused him, his wife and his wife's uncle, Wiley Watson, of issuing a worthless cheque in San Diego.

At San Francisco, counsel for the wife said blackmailers had been extorting large sums from Monks on threats of "exposing" a connection with a "student scandal" at a New England university several years ago.

The attorney said the estate was valued at about $2,000,000.

BANKHEAD AT THE DOMINION

Beautiful Star Has Leading Role in "Thunder Below," Now Showing

Remaining at the top demands much greater actual work and worry than arriving at the pinnacle of screen fame, recently declared Tallulah Bankhead, who is starring in Paramount's "Thunder Below," which is the Dominion Theatre's feature picture for three days, beginning to-day.

"Breaks," those quirks of fortune in every player's career, aid materially in bringing one to popularity, but are almost useless when one has attained this prominence, the star believes.

"An actor with a personality which will register favorably with the public, is equipped for stardom," she explains. "Then all that is needed is a fortunate chance, which nearly always comes if a player is of stellar material. It is comparatively simple.

"Unless an actor has this so-called personal magnetism, he never reaches the top, so his worries are over early.

"But once a public figure, real work begins. Luck plays no further part. Then, the star must study night and day to keep from growing self-satisfied; to continually add new mannerisms which will retain public interest; to safeguard against a bad part or a poor story, and to alter his work when it appears that public intrigue is waning."

PLAYHOUSE THEATRE

EMPIRE THEATRE

The tremendous portent of a tiny blonde mustache tickled the wires of some 3,000 miles of telephone and telegraph right of way before Paramount could begin filming "The Wiser Sex," a modern love drama of a debutante who turns sleuth to exonerate her fiance from a frame-up.

Studio officials at New York set in motion all these electric lip movements, to acquire permission to abolish the hirsuite weakness of Melvyn Douglas, stage and screen star of "To-night or Never," and the leading man featured with Claudette Colbert in the new attraction which is at the Empire Theatre to-day.

As time for shooting one of the scenes drew near, Director Berthold Viertel decided that the Douglas mustache was not in keeping with the character. A conference brought forth the fact that the facial appearance of Douglas was entirely in the custody of another producer who holds first mortgage rights on the player, and who, at the moment requiring a decision, was no nearer than Hollywood.

CAPITOL THEATRE

Mystery, jealousy, intrigue, romance and laughter are the composite elements said to make "The Trial of Vivienne Ware," the Fox picture, at the Capitol Theatre to-day, one of the most gripping and, at the same time, highly entertaining pictures of the year. Joan Bennett, star of many recent successes, including "Doctors' Wives," "She Wanted a Millionaire" and "Careless Lady," portrays the leading role. Others in important parts are Donald Cook, Allan Dinehart, Lilian Bond, Skeets Gallagher, Herbert Mundin, William Pawley, Zasu Pitts and Ruth Selwyn.

ROMANO THEATRE

When John Boles went to high school at Greenville, Texas, he was the strikeout baseball pitching sensation of the southwest, but when he later attended the University of Texas, he forgot baseball, and devoted himself to singing, serving for three years as the baritone soloist of the college glee club. There he received the voice training which later led him to the musical comedy stage, and eventually to talking pictures as the first great singer of the screen. His latest picture, in which, incidentally, he does not sing, is "Seed," Universal's absorbing problem drama which is now playing at the Romano Theatre.

COMING TO EMPIRE

FLOWER SHOW PLANS DRAFTED

Ninth Annual Display of Victoria Society at Willows Next Week

The Victoria Horticultural Society will hold its ninth annual summer show in the main building at the Willows on Friday and Saturday of next week. The committee in charge of arrangement is now completing what is hoped to be one of the finest exhibitions ever staged under the auspices of the local society.

In deciding to hold the show at the Willows, the committee also recognized that the overcrowding experienced during the last two years would be overcome, and this year ample space will be given both to competitive and non-competitive displays, which will enable all visitors to view the exhibition in comfort.

In addition to the many competitive entries contained in the prize list, promises of assistance continue to come in for commercial display and those from private gardens. Among the popular competitive features is again the class for decorated tables, which according to the list, must be decorated with sweet peas only. This class as in former years will be adjudicated upon by the public.

SWEET PEA SECTION

All patrons on the first day of the show will have an opportunity of voting. It is expected that the sweet pea section will be well cared for, as well developed specimens are now being gathered, and a large showing of gladioli may be expected, if the weather man smiles upon the local society between now and the day of the show.

A very attractive and varied prize list has been issued, and classes have been arranged so that anyone interested in horticulture might make some exhibit. This list embraces all kinds of fruit, flowers and vegetables, and contains over 100 classes.

OTHER ATTRACTIONS

The committee is also working on a plan to provide additional attractions, amongst which will be dancing by the young pupils of Miss Florence Clough, both afternoon and evening, both days of the show. The general public is advised to use the commutation admission ticket, which includes two street car fares and a numbered ticket for other special advantages. Intending exhibitors are advised that prize lists can be obtained from any floral store, from the public market, or will be mailed on application to the secretary, F. E. Boulter, 536 Obed Avenue, telephone E 8490.

The lady members, together with the wives of members of the Victoria Horticultural Society, will meet at the City Hall to-morrow evening at 8 o'clock to discuss the arrangements for catering at the society's annual show, which is being held at the Willows, Friday and Saturday of next week.

Former Victorian Dies in Portland

News has been received in the city of the death in St. Helen's, Oregon, of Dr. J. T. Martin, son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Martin, of Victoria, who passed away suddenly on Friday last.

Dr. Martin was born in Cornwall, England, and resided here for many years before going to Oregon. He is survived by his widow, formerly Florence Mills, of Victoria; five sisters, Mrs. W. H. Kent, St. Patrick Street, Victoria; Mrs. C. B. Hoffman, Mrs. Martin Potts and Mrs. Emmet Drake of Portland, Oregon, and Mrs. J. F. Sallaway, Riverside, Cal.; a brother, Dr. G. H. Martin, Vancouver, and several nephews and nieces.

INSURANCE MEN BACK NEW TAX

Levy on Unlicensed Companies and Other Matters Dealt With To-day

The more important matters emanating from joint executive meetings of fire insurance agents' associations in Victoria, Vancouver and Nanaimo were outlined in the report of J. L. Mara, president of the Victoria District Fire Insurance Agents' Association, before the annual meeting in the S.O.E. Hall this afternoon. In the absence of Mr. Mara, who is in England, the report was read by D. W. Campbell, the vice-president.

The matters included support of the Federal Government in its imposition of the 15 per cent tax on unlicensed insurance companies, fire prevention propaganda in the schools, the work of the contact committee dealing with the unfair competition of non-board agents, and the new Auto Insurance Financial Responsibility Act, whereby an owner of an automobile is compelled to carry insurance or show other financial responsibility when unable to satisfy a judgment arising out of an accident, before being permitted to operate an automobile again.

MEETS WITH SUCCESS

The report continues:

"Your association has been successful in getting the board to take off exposure charges in Oak Bay in regard to dwellings and hopes in the near future to obtain relief in Esquimalt and the protected areas of Saanich.

"We were also successful in restraining the provincial government from repealing section 140 of the Insurance Act. The repeal of this cetion would permit the writing of commercial risks on a three or more years basis, which would be very detrimental to our business.

"The executive committee had an interview with the superintendent of insurance in respect to indiscriminate licensing of agents. We met with no success, the superintendent taking the attitude that he had no power to refuse an application sponsored by an insurance company."

The report of F. F. Fatt, who has been secretary of the association ever since its formation twelve years ago, revealed a membership of eighty-four as compared with ninety-four last year. Tribute was paid to the courtesy of the British Columbia Insurance Underwriters' Association, and especially to the district manager, D. A. S. McGregor, for the amicable understanding which existed between the two bodies. Mr. Fatt also presented the annual balance sheet and financial statement.

One of the prominent items of business dealt with the opening of an insurance institute here to act as a training school for young agents, to be conducted by branch managers and visiting head office men. The idea of such institutes has been catching on in other cities, it was pointed out, and in Vancouver the institute had proved of great practical benefit.

The question of woodworking rates on unsprinklered risks was also an important matter discussed by the members.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

Funeral services for John Richard Grice, for thirty-three years a street car operator with the B.C. Electric Railway, will be held to-morrow at 2.30 o'clock from Hayward's B.C. Funeral Parlors, and interment will be in the family plot at Ross Bay Cemetery. Rev. Dr. J. K. Unsworth will officiate.

DUTIES MAY BAR PEACHES

Hot Weather in East Makes Lemons Jump; Apricots Ready For Preserving

New Dump Levies Threaten Imports, Wholesalers Say

Seasonal and dump duties may prohibit the importation of peaches from the United States, it was claimed in Wholesale Row this morning. A seasonal duty of 1¼c per pound was imposed this morning and the dump duty rate is expected to be announced this afternoon, which will increase the rate about ½c per pound. Only a few peaches are now in the wholesale sheds and it was stated that the new duties would prohibit the handling of them.

Seasonal duties on cantaloupes of 1½c per pound, instead of the former 20 per cent, were also brought into effect this morning. A further dump duty to be imposed on August 1 will increase the duty to 1¾c per pound. When this new duty is put on it will be practically impossible to import the fruit from the United States, wholesalers said.

No more eating cherries from local points will be on the market this season. The rains of the last two weeks ruined the local crop and all eating cherries must come from outside points. Cooking cherries are now being received locally and a good crop is expected. A half car of eating cherries from the Okanagan district was received at the beginning of the week and further shipments are expected soon. Okanagan apricots are now in demand for preserving and as the season will only last ten days or two weeks, housewives are advised to procure their fruit before it is too late. The fruit is at its best just now for putting down and a rush is expected by the wholesalers.

Owing to the hot weather now being experienced in the east the lemon market has advanced rapidly during the last few days. A car of California lemonds and a car of cantaloupes were received by the local warehousees early this week. Australian oranges and lemons and bananas from Honolulu were received late last week.

Says He Stole To Support Wife, Baby

George Kitchener Sentenced to Three Years; Admits Thirteen Offences

Serious Crimes; Says Magistrate; Youth Expresses Regret

Before he was sentenced this morning to a three-year term in the penitentiary, George Kitchener, self-confessed burglar, told Magistrate George Jay he was very sorry for what he had done.

"I was out of work and couldn't get a job. I had a wife and baby to support, and they did not have the necessities of life. I had to do something," he said.

A crowd which filled the courtroom heard the twenty-year-old youth explain that he had embarked on a career of burglary to support his girl wife and their baby.

Kitchener had just finished entering pleas of guilty to ten counts of breaking and entering and three charges of theft.

Tanned, in contrast to his blond hair, the blue-eyed youth just nodded his head in admission of guilt as charge after charge was read out against him.

He made no comment when the magistrate passed sentence, left the prisoner's box and went quickly back to the cells. A buzz of conversation arose in the courtroom crowd which included several young women.

The magistrate's comments were brief.

SERIOUS OFFENCES

"You must realize," he said, "that these are very serious offences. You stand convicted of eight charges of breaking and entering dwelling houses, two charges of breaking and entering shops and three charges of theft.

"Not only as punishment to yourself, but as an example to others I must impose a severe sentence on you. Dwelling houses in the city must be protected from intrusion."

The individual sentences were three years on each of twelve counts, running concurrently, and six months on one minor theft charge, concurrent with the other terms.

APPREHENDED BEFORE

As a juvenile Kitchener had a conviction against him for breaking and entering, for which he received a year's suspended sentence. He was married about two years ago.

The young burglar's loot includes jewelry of various sorts, cash and other material, with a total value of between $1,000 and $1,500. Most of the offences were committed in February and March of this year, but others dated back to early last year.

Kitchener was arrested last Sunday evening at his home, 984 Redfern Street, by Detective Inspector Jack McLellan and Detectives F. Woodburn and H. Jarvis. It was explained to the court that in addition to the stolen articles involved in the charges, the police had found in the home several other articles which had not been traced to their owners.

GOODS STOLEN

Following is a detailed and chronological account of the various burglaries to which he pleaded guilty:

February 25, 1931—Breaking and entering the shop of Walter Walker & Son, Johnson Street, and stealing an ohmmeter, six radio tubes and $3 in coppers.

July 10, 1931—Breaking and entering Minty's Limited, 965 Yates Street, and stealing one radio set.

February 3, 1932—Breaking and entering home of W. Swire Mitchell, 15 Beach Drive, and stealing a gold wrist watch, two bracelets, three brooches, a gold pendant, two pairs of earrings and $50 in cash.

February 16—Breaking and entering home of Winnifred Duggan, 1838 Brighton Street, and stealing lady's solitaire ring, gold pendant and English sovereign.

February 17—Breaking and entering home of W. G. Aggar, 1218 Hewlett Place, and stealing a gentleman's wrist watch, a masonic ring, lady's gold ring, white gold bar brooch, necklet, pearl, sunburst and string of crystals.

February 25—Breaking and entering home of Dr. V. F. Smith, Upper Terrace, Oak Bay, and stealing one platinum and diamond lavaliere valued at $400, a fountain pen, automatic screwdriver and $30 in cash.

March 13 — Breaking and entering home of Mrs. R. G. Gordon, 730 St. Patrick Street, and stealing two brooches, one diamond set gold bracelet, two gold wedding rings and $2 in cash.

March 31 — Breaking and entering home of W. F. Pinfold, 1710 Rockland Avenue, and stealing a gold nugget tie-pin, one small tie-pin and $48.30 in cash.

May 7—Breaking and entering home of Miss Adele McLeod, 59 Howe Street, and stealing one leather coat, one bracelet, two rings, two brooches, a pendant and a gold chain.

BRANSON LEAVES ON MEXICO TOUR

On a tour of Mexico, which will take him the next several weeks, Cecil L. H. Branson, Mexican Consul, left Victoria this afternoon.

Mr. Branson said this was the first visit he has made to Mexico for years. Besides Mexico City, he will visit Vera Cruz and spend some time at properties he owns there. Mr. Branson lived in Mexico before coming to Victoria, and for years has held important oil and other properties.

ROB VICTORIAN IN VANCOUVER

Vancouver, July 20 — Numerous burglaries and house-breaking were reported to police overnight Tuesday. Mrs. E. S. Grosneth, Heatley Avenue, lost a $100 ring to a prowler. Mrs. M. Howden, Victoria, lost a purse containing $25 and a watch.

KIDD REPORT URGES CUTS

Six-man Cabinet, Abandonment of P.G.E., Halving of Legislature Also Indicated

Cutting annual expenditure of the British Columbia Government down to $18,500,000 which is the amount of government revenue banking authorities estimate business and taxpayers generally in the province can produce if their affairs are to be in a healthy condition, is one of the chief recommendations in the Kidd report, according to intimations that has been issued with regard to the contents of the document now in the hands of the cabinet.

The expenditure of the British Columbia Government last year was around $30,000,000, and for the current year the estimates call for $24,600,000.

The report has not been officially issued by the government, but it is understood, the document is silent on the question of the University of British Columbia, but recommends drastic cuts in the public school expenditure. It is understood that it recommends raising the minimum number of pupils for rural school classes from four to fifteen.

Other government changes it recommends are:

1—Reduction of the present cabinet of nine ministers to a Premier and five ministers, the five ministeries to be Finance, Natural Resources, Social Services and Works.

2—Reduction in the size of the provincial legislature to around twenty-one member, with a maximum mentioned of twenty-eight and minimum of fourteen.

3—Redistribution of all provincial ridings to make them correspond with the federal ridings in this province.

4—Complete reorganization of the government's methods of purchasing.

5—Disposal of complete abandonment of the Pacific Great Eastern Railway.

7—Further cuts in all provincial departments.

8—Abandonment of patronage and the system of political preferment in public works.

PATTULLO PROTESTS SECRECY

T. D. Pattullo, leader of the Liberal Opposition, voiced protest to-day against the action of the government in not immediately making public the report of the Kidd Committee. In this connection, Mr. Pattullo said:

"I have asked the government to furnish me with a copy of the report, but it has refused to do so. Various rumors are now circulating as to what the report contains, and delay in publishing the report will only result in misapprehensions. Many of us, I think, can anticipate some of the recommendations, but we should have the exact terms of the report, and have them forthwith.

"This government gave access to governmental records to the Kidd Committee, which access it refused to the elected representatives of the people, and now refuses to make public the report. It would appear that the government expects to secure some advantage from a study of the recommendations previous to scrutiny by the public. There would seem to be no other reason for withholding the report, as ultimately it must be published.

"If there is a wrong way to do a thing, this government appears to have a superlative faculty for doing it.

WANTS PREMIER ON JOB

"The Prime Minister of this province ought to be here on the job.

"In the riding of Columbia, the government called a by-election before the former member was decently interred. We have heard nothing of a by-election in Mackenzie. The decent thing to do by the people of British Columbia now is for the Prime Minister to return to his duties here and call a general election forthwith."

LAUDS RELIEF ADMINISTRATION

Welfare Worker Says City Office Handles Problem Splendidly

Miss Charlotte Whitton, director of the Canadian Council of Child and Family Welfare, praised as efficient the administration of Victoria's direct relief department in the course of an address before social welfare workers here yesterday.

During her visit to the city Miss Whitton inspected the system carried on at the relief office, and in her talk took occasion to compliment the city on handling the problem in such an excellent manner.

E. G. Snowden, city relief officer, received a tribute from Miss Whitton for his supervision of the staff, which handles relief for more than 800 families in the city, numbering several thousand persons. The organization was excellent, she said.

"The centralization of public authorities' responsibility is one of the biggest things that has come out of the depression. Victoria is handling its problem splendidly, with other cities," she said.

Mayor Leeming, who tendered the vote of thanks, expressed himself as confident that the city's relief administration was in capable hands.

B.C. APPOINTMENTS

Frank L. Lade has been appointed temporary engineer at Vancouver, according to an order-in-council brought down to-day.

Joseph William Cameron, engineer at the courthouse, Vancouver, is retired from service.

J. Tilton has resigned as commissioner of the new Lulu Island Slouth Dyking District, and Rice Rees has been appointed to his place.

John R. Saunders, of Esquimalt, has been appointed a member of the board before whom appeals shall be heard under the Town Planning Act in cases involving that municipality.

EXPECTS DEBT CANCELLATION

Indications Pointing to Wiping Out of War Debts, Kiwanis Club Told

Prof. F. W. Soward, U.B.C., Gives Review of Present Conditions

Seeing in the recent debt-reduction move at Lausanne the possibility of eventual cancellation, Prof. F. H. Soward, head of the department of history at the University of British Columbia, pointed to hopeful signs for the settlement of the vexed question of reparations and war debts in a review of world conditions given to the Kiwanis Club at its luncheon in the Empress Hotel yesterday.

The object of the conference was to remodel the reparations scheme and assist in economic reconstruction, Prof. Soward noted.

At the close of the war Germany had been told for what she would have to pay. At that time no amount was set. In 1921 the reparations committee fixed further to $9,000,000,000 and set up new an unwillingness to pay had been aroused in that country. The imposition of debt charges had caused the collapse of the monetary system in that country. In 1924, the Dawes plan, which stabilized German currency, reduced considerably the amount that country was obliged to pay. The Young commission in 1929 cut it down still further to $9,000,000 and set up new machinery for payment. It did not, however, like the Dawes scheme, set a price index which would fix the payments according to fluctuating prices.

PREPARED FOR LAUSANNE

Later still came the conference of experts at Basle, at which plans were laid for the Lausanne gathering.

Prof. Soward remarked upon the fact the Balfour note of 1929 had suggested the cancellation of war debts. Britain had been prepared at that time to excuse its debtors if others did likewise. But the United States, the leading creditor, and France, the nation which desired restitution for the war damage to its territory, had been averse to the step.

The speaker referred to the difficulty of making payments by transporting funds for which no goods were exchanged to indicate the transfer. Fundamentally, he added, all debts and reparations had to be paid in goods.

This fact had not been fully recognized by the United States when it had raised high tariff barriers against foreign goods, and still demanded payment of debts in full.

MIGHT HAVE SOLVED PROBLEM

Prof. Soward expressed the belief that had a conference been called in 1929, when the world financial crash occurred, a settlement might have been made. However, the conference had not been called until much later, when the United States congress stated it was not in favor of debt reduction.

Political influences brought to bear on the different countries both in Europe and the United States through their elections had hampered expedient action and delayed the Lausanne gathering, he continued. During the delay, falling prices and shrinking trade added to the complexity of the economic problem, which was further aggravated by increasing tariffs and currency restrictions.

As the date for Lausanne was pushed forward, things went for the worse in Germany, where the able Chancellor Bruening was ousted by backstairs intrigue and replaced by Von Papen's cabinet of barons, a set not likely to reach as desirable agreement as the former. In France conditions improved slightly, Prof. Soward stated.

CALLED FOR ACTION

In the face of the crisis, Premier Ramsay MacDonald rushed ahead with the Lausanne conference arrangements with a strong plea for action.

The speaker referred to the non-German payments discussed at the gathering and concluded with a message of hope in which he looked largely to the United States to assist in the problem by relaxing to a much greater extent her claims for payment. There was a strong indication, he said, that cancellation of all debts would eventually be achieved.

The machinery was all in order for recovery. It was up to the nations to see that they pulled themselves out of the trouble they were in.

B. C. Nicholas moved a vote of thanks to the speaker.

Mrs. J. F. Errington Died This Morning

At the family residence, 1421 Stadacona Avenue, the death occurred this morning of Mrs. Kate Selby Errington, wife of J. F. Errington, aged sixty-three years. Mrs. Errington had been a resident of this city for twenty years and is survived by her husband, one daughter, Virtue, and a son, Charles Errington. The funeral will be held to-morrow at 1.45 o'clock, from Hayward's B.C. Funeral Chapel, proceeding to St. Mary's Church, Oak Bay, where Rev. Canon A. E. de L. Nunns will conduct the services at 2 o'clock. Interment will be in Royal Oak Burial Park.

Doukhobor Women End Hunger Strike

The 120 Doukhobor women prisoners serving three-year terms in Nelson jail for parading in the nude, while awaiting transfer to Pier Island, are again eating three meals a day, it was learned at provincial police headquarters today.

The women declared a hunger strike on Sunday upon hearing of the deaths of an octogenarian and two infants at Oakalla. When informed by their friends that the aged Doukhobor had died from natural causes, also the two infants, the recalcitrants again began to take nourishment.

Previous hunger strikes by these women have not lasted more than three days, so provincial police authorities were not disturbed by the report of Sunday's strike.

COMMENT ON SIR HENRY THORNTON'S RESIGNATION

Canadian Press

Vancouver, July 20.—Commenting on the resignation of Sir Henry Thornton, The Vancouver Province on its editorally says:

After ten years as head of the Canadian National Railway, Sir Henry Thornton has resigned: It is not surprising that he has done so. For some time his position has been growing more and more uncomfortable. As he himself stated in his letter to the minister, a publicly-owned railway can only be successfully directed if the management has the complete confidence of the owners; and Sir Henry, since the parliamentary inquiry of last winter, has evidently not had the complete confidence of the Canadian government or the Canadian people. Whether the government and the people are right or wrong in their attitude to Sir Henry is, for the moment, beside the question. A good deal of evidence came out at the inquiry which undoubtedly reflected on the management of the Canadian National. At the same time the inquiry was not a judicial one. There were not a few features about it that savored of bitterness and partisanship.

Before the war, Canada went mad over railroad building, and the legacies of that madness are still with us. When Sir Henry Thornton came, in 1922, he found not a railway to administer, but a tremendously costly collection of scraps. Two transcontinental lines had been built in the boom days, but neither of them had been built as railways should be built, with the economics of railroading always in view. One of them had been made to serve political ends. The other had been built for the sake of the money that could be made from building. To these two, flung back on the hands of the Canadian people by the war depression, was added the Inter-colonial, another line constructed with political and military rather than railway ideas dominant. Out of this mess Sir Henry Thornton was expected to make a real effective, aggressive transcontinental railway, and it must always be to his credit as a railroadman that he did what he was expected to do. But he did it at a price which was, perhaps, too high.

When Sir Henry took charge, the Canadian National had no unity. It had no policy. It didn't know where it was going. It had no goal. It had no morale. To its rivel, the Canadian Pacific, it was a joke. Sir Henry made it a real railroad, and though he could never bring it to the pitch of efficiency where it could meet the charges on its tremendously inflated capitalization, he made it efficient enough and aggressive enough to be a real rival to the Canadian Pacific. The Canadian National is no joke to the C.P.R. to-day.

The railway situation in Canada today is very nearly tragic and much of the responsibility for the situation which has developed must be laid at Sir Henry Thornton's door. He consolidated and established his railway, but he consolidated and established it largely at the expense of the rival line. A sort of feud developed between him and President Beatty, and the feud took the form of a competition in spending. Each road tried to outbuild the other in branch lines, hotels, steamships and country resorts. But Sir Henry, with the Dominion treasury behind him, had rather the edge on his competitor. The tragedy of the situation was that, whichever of the rivals won, Canada was sure to lose. Only if both won could Canada gain. As it happened, neither won. It might almost be said that the two roads fought one another to a standstill. And while they were fighting, a rival of both, the motor truck and motor car, was insidiously destroying the railroad business. Then the depression came.

It is easy to blame Sir Henry Thornton for his ambitions and his extravagances and the ruthlessness of his fight against the Canadian Pacific. No doubt it would have been better had he had more modest ideas. But he was not the only person in Canada who went along on the assumption that good times would last forever. There were about 10,000,000 others. The years of Sir Henry's triumphs in Canada were rather hollow years; years when we forgot we were a new country of primary production and went in for forth and show. We built the superstructure—our cities and our business and our resorts—before we established our foundation, our farms and our basic industries. Now, for all of us, comes the day of reckoning. Sir Henry goes and we repent.

Alberta Horse Judge Goes to Peace River

The Alberta Department of Agriculture, at the request of the British Columbia department, has sent an official judge from their Peace River district to act as draft horse judge at the British Columbia Peace River fall fair, it was learned at the Parliament Buildings to-day.

This act of courtesy on the part of the neighboring province will save the local government a goodly amount in traveling expenses, as the official acting at the fair is just finishing similar duties on the Alberta side of the boundary, and is close at hand, while sending a judge from exhibition centres in this province would entail much time and transportation.

Lew Rush and Glen Robbins Thank Citizens for Support

Athlete Has Hard Time Winning Two Events at Olympics

Stars of Former Years Depended More on Sheer Courage

Nurmi Only Athlete Who Holds Two All-time Olympic Marks

CLEAN CUT, husky, without being muscle-bound, and packed with the fighting spirit in spite of their mild exteriors, Victoria's two blonde Canadian bike riders, Lew Rush and Glen Robbins, left for the Olympic Games on the H. F. Alexander yesterday evening.

And one of the last messages they left for Victoria in general was one of sincere gratitude for the support given them by the citizens and firms who had raised the money to send them down. With a half-shy smile on his face, Lew put it in his own words: "Gee, we sure appreciate the way the people have helped us in this." Rush and Robbins, two of the finest riders developed in British Columbia, are expected to do well in the Olympic competitions. Frank Elliott and Leo Marchiori, both of Vancouver, are the other two members of the Canadian team.

It is hard for a man to win two running events at different distances nowadays, writes Mel Sheppard, Olympic hero of 1908, because there are so many specialists who train for one race.

An athlete who can win the 100 metres has to change his gears to compete successfully in the 200 metres, and in doing so he will find himself running against stars geared expertly for that distance.

That condition did not prevail in the old days, partly because there were not so many expert track mechanics to adjust the athlete's gears, and partly because the stars of other years depended more upon sheer courage than do to-day's runners.

The year 1904, when the Olympic games were held at St. Louis, brought out some startling performances. That was the year when the great Harry Hillman, now track coach at Dartmouth University, and J. D. Lightbody ran all over the place for the United States, each coming home with a triple victory.

Hillman won the 400 metres, and the 200-metre and 400-metre hurdles. Lightbody won the 800-metre and 1,500-metre runs and then stepped out and knocked off the 2,500-metre steeplechase.

An athlete who confided to his coach an intention to train for such varied distances as Lightbody covered would be looked upon with some suspicion as to his mentality. Modern coaches do not attempt to change an athlete's gears to match such performances.

The deeds of Hillman and Lightbody were not the only unusual feats of that year. Archie Hahn grabbed victories in the 100-metre and 200-metre flat races. The visiting firemen must have gained a respectful impression of American versatility in good old 1904.

Bob Ewry won three Olympic events twice in a row, in 1900 and 1904, the standing high jump, standing broad jump and standing hop, step and jump.

Probably the record that never will be duplicated in any Olympics is that of A. E. Kraenzlein, who won the United States four events in the 1900 Olympics at Paris—the sixty-metre run, 110-metre hurdles, 200-metre hurdles and running broad jump.

It was in 1906 that Paul Pilgrim turned in his mighty performance at Athens, winning the 400-metre and 800-metre runs. Mr. Lightbody was still on the job, but he could win only the 1,500 metres.

And, in 1908, in the Olympic games at London, Mel Sheppard himself surprisingly knocked off the 800-metre and 1,500-metre events, though he was not expected even to compete in the longer race.

On the subject of records, there is only one athlete who holds Olympic all-time marks in two events. That is Paavo Nurmi, the Finnish phantom.

Nurmi holds the Olympic records of 14 minutes 31.2 seconds for the 5,000-metre run, and 30 minutes 18 4-5 seconds for the 10,000 metres. If he is to establish a new time for the twenty-six-mile marathon this year, he will have to go faster than one of his own countrymen, Hannes Kolehmainen, ran in 1920, as Hannes holds the record with 2 hours 32 minutes 35 4-5 seconds.

El Ouafi of France came very close to Kolehmainen's mark in the 1928 Olympics when he covered the terrain in 2 hours 32 minutes 57 seconds. He was only 21 1-5 seconds slower than Hannes, and over a twenty-six-mile route, that isn't much.

Winnipeg May Send Fighter to Games

Winnipeg, July 20. — Winnipeg will have one boxer at the Olympic Games at Los Angeles if an amateur outdoor boxing show now being arranged is a success. Fight enthusiasts are promoting the show to raise funds to send Paul Frederickson, lightweight, to the world meet. Frederick was named an alternate member of the Canadian team following the Olympic boxing trials in Toronto.

Entries Close On Aug. 3 For Event At Colwood Links

Seniors' Northwest Golf Association Tournament From August 8 to 12 Will Draw Entries From All Parts of Pacific Coast and Prairies; Sixty Entries Have Already Been Received; International Team Match One of Features of Tourney

Senior golfers from all parts of the Pacific Coast and prairies will gather in Victoria next month for the tenth annual tournament of the Seniors' Northwest Golf Association at the Colwood Golf Club from August 8 to 12. Entries for the tournament will close on August 3 and must be in the hands of Secretary J. V. Perks, Victoria Golf Club, by that date. About sixty entries have already been received.

Special features of the tournament will be the international match between American and Canadian members, on Friday, August 12, and the annual dinner at the Union Club in the evening of that day.

Play on the opening day will be in the eighteen-hole qualifying round for the association championship, with the best sixteen gross scores of all classes qualifying for the grand championship. The sixteen best scores in the various classes will qualify for their division championships. The association is divided into four classes, "A," "B," "C" and "D," according to ages. All competitors failing to qualify in the championship classes will be divided into flights, according to their scores.

On Tuesday the first round of match play will take place in the grand championships and the class championships, while on Wednesday the second round will be played, along with the first round in the first flight and the second round in all other flights. On Thursday the semi-finals will be seen in the championships and other flights, also a championship bogey competition, eighteen holes on handicap and putting and long driving competitions

FINALS ON FRIDAY

Friday will witness the finals of the championships and other flights. In the afternoon the international match will be played for the Nichol Cup over eighteen holes, teams to consist of fifteen players aside. Another match will be played between all-America and all-Canada teams of unlimited numbers. This will be fourball matches.

At 5.30 o'clock, Friday afternoon, the prizes will be presented at the clubhouse, with the exception of the major awards, which will be distributed at the annual dinner.

The annual meeting of the association will be held on Thursday afternoon at 5.30 o'clock in the Colwood clubhouse.

Monday, August 8

Tuesday, August 9

Wednesday, August 10

Second round in grand championship, "A," "B," "C" "D" class championships, first round in first flight and second round in all other flights.

Four-ball foursome competition, eighteen holes medal play. Full handicaps, limited to twenty-four, deducted from aggregate scores. Players to choose partners and opponents and arrange starting time, and to make post entries with the starter. Competitors to tee off after championships and flights have all started.

Thursday, August 11

Semi-finals in championships and flights. Championship bogey competition (eighteen holes on handicap). To tee off after semi-finals have started.

Friday, August 12

5.30 p.m.—Distribution of prizes, except the grand championship, the four class championships and bogey championship prizes, which will be presented by the president at the annual dinner.

8 p.m.—Annual dinner at Union Club.

RULES

In the bogey championship the handicaps will be reduced by seven, the difference between par and bogey, and three-quarters of the reduced handicaps will be allowed. In the bogey and four-ball foursome players will make post entries with the starter and will choose their partners and opponents.

Flights, except the grand championship, class championship and first flight, will be played under handicap, and three-quarters of the difference in handicaps will be allowed. Handicaps limited to twenty-four.

The putting competition shall consist of two rounds of the putting green or eighteen holes. Players must be accompanied by a competitor or scorer, who shall sign their cards. Competitors shall play not more than two rounds of eighteen holes in the competition each day. All putts must be holed out.

Competitors qualifying for the grand championship may, if they desire to do so, play in their class championships instead. Notice of their intention to do so must be given to the secretary or scorer when handing in their score cards. Competitors will start in threes when playing in the qualifying round.

All entries must be in the hands of the secretary, together with application for tickets for the annual dinner (if desirous of attending) by August 3, if possible. Members will greatly help the tournament committee by conforming to this request. Handicaps must be certified on entry card by member's club secretary. Entries received after August 6 will only be accepted by permission of the tournament committee. Entries to be sent to J. V. Perks, secretary-treasurer, S.N.W.G.A., Victoria Golf Club.

JASPER LINKS MADE EASIER

Several Greens and Tees Changed For Annual Totem Pole Tourney Sept. 3 to 10

Jasper Park Lodge, July 20—When the seventh annual Totem Pole golf tournament is held here September 3 to 10, players will quickly recognize the fact that many changes have been made on the championship golf course since the last tournament. A unique feature of the changes is that they have been made to favor the player, not to make it tougher for them. Under any conditions the golf course here is not an easy scoring one, except on those days when the ball goes on a bee line for the cup. It is to make scoring a little easier for the average golfer, at the same time maintaining the dignity of the course, that the changes have been made.

After several years of experimenting, it has been decided to make a change in the grass on the putting greens. Enough for three greens has been grown in the nursery and this year the new grass has been placed on holes number seven, number ten and number twelve. Holes seven and twelve are one shotters and in replacing the grass, the front of each green has been built up, making a most advantageous change on the green. Number ten is a long par five hole, severely trapped with the green well placed.

The tees at number nine and sixteen have been widened considerably which adds to the comfort of the golfers in driving. Previously these tees had been rather confined as to area. Generally speaking these changes have made golfing at Jasper easier than before and a piece of good news to come very shortly is that the famous "Bad Baby," the fifteenth hole, will have the green enlarged, much to the joy of hundreds of exasperated golfers.

EAGLES WIN FROM TAIYOS

Score Ninth Straight Twilight League Victory in Setting Back Nippons

Scoring on a wild pitch by Ishida in the eighth inning, Robinson tallied the deciding run in the Twilight Baseball League game at the Royal Athletic Park yesterday evening, giving the Eagles their ninth successive victory, by a 9 to 8 count over Taiyos. It was the closest the birdmen had come to defeat during the year.

As a result of the victory Eagles virtually cinched first berth in the play-offs.

From the start the game was close. Trailing in the fifth, Taiyos came through with a smart rally to catch the Eagles. The feathered tribe went out in front again in the seventh, but Ishida cracked out a smart single to drive in the tying runs. His overthrow in the last frame, however, gave the Eagles the winning run.

Minnis and Morgan Turn Out For Elks

Two Members of Last Year's Championship Club on Deck Again To-night

Elks Will Oppose League-leading Green Mill; Norm Forbes Out of Game

Strengthened by the addition of two of their last year's championship club, Art Minnis and Jack Morgan, the Elks will oppose the league leading Green Mill nine this evening at the Royal Athletic Park in the Senior Amateur Baseball League. The fixture will get under way at 6.15 o'clock with Allie McGregor in charge.

After starting the season with several youngsters on their club the Elks have decided to call on the veterans for assistance in their battle for the city baseball championship. Several weeks ago Murty Dunn, another of last year's players, was brought out again and his addition has strengthened the club considerably.

Minnis, who broke into the game last Saturday against the visiting Forks Lumber Company team from Washington, will be at second base for the Elks, while Morgan will hold down third base. Morgan has been getting into shape for the last two weeks and the Elks are counting on his batting strength to give them added power at the plate. Morgan led the league last year in home runs and no doubt there will be considerable interest amongst the fans as to whether or not he will still be able to lift the ball over the fence since the field has been enlarged.

FORBES OUT

The Elks suffered a severe blow to their championship hopes yesterday when Norm Forbes, star infielder, outfielder and pitcher, was ordered out of the game for a month with a strained ligament in his shoulder. Forbes has been a great utility man for the Elks this season and his presence on the line-up will be sorely missed.

"Doc" Webster is expected to be Elks' selection for mound duty tonight. In his last appearance Webster turned back the Sons of Canada in fine style. He will most likely be opposed by Holden, ace pitcher of the Green Mill.

Manager Walter Lorimer of the Elks will leave the city to-night to attend a convention in Winnipeg, and during his absence the Elks will be managed by Forbes.

BAYS' CREWS TO HOLD WORKOUT

Crews of the James Bay Athletic Association, which will meet the Shawnigan Lake Athletic Club in a regatta on Saturday, will hold a special workout at the Gorge this evening. All oarsmen selected for the local boats must turn out for the practice in order to hold their positions.

ONE-HIT GAME IN MINOR LOOP

Walter Brown Turns in Masterful Pitching Performance For Montreal

Walter Brown, Montreal right hander, has been one of the International League's outstanding pitchers all this season so far as dependability is concerned, and today he had a new bit of glory to add to his distinction of being a pitcher who would win if given any sort of a chance.

With ten victories in eighteen decisions, yesterday he stepped out and hurled a one-hit game against Reading in about as neat a bit of hurling as the league has seen all season. He got by with a single walk and fanned six. Montreal won the game, 4 to 0.

Baltimore's Orioles crept a game closer to the second-place Buffalo Bisons by pulling out a ten-inning 11 to 9 decision. Rochester handed the league-leading Newark Bears a second straight defeat, 6 to 2.

Art Smith gave Toronto both good pitching and good batting, and the Leafs defeated Jersey City 6 to 4. Smith gave ten hits and made two of Toronto's twelve.

MUST MEET LEWIS

Montreal, July 20—The Montreal Athletic Commission, which recognizes Henri Degiane as world heavyweight wrestling champion, yesterday ordered him to meet Ed. "Strangler" Lewis within thirty days or submit to the commission's action in regard to the title.

JIM LONDOS AT SEATTLE

Seattle, July 20—Northwest wrestling fans will be treated to the greatest wrestling programme ever offered in this section of the country Friday night, July 22, at the Seattle Civic Arena when Jim Londos, recognized heavyweight champion of the world meets Abe Coleman, Jewish flash in an eight ten-minute round championship match.

Londos, acclaimed as "king" of all the present-day wrestlers, will be meeting a worthy foe when he defends his title against Coleman, as the sensational Jewish mat man has been winning with marked regularity in his recent bouts. Londos will have a two-pound weight advantage over his Jewish rival and will also measure three inches taller than Coleman.

Nore Jerlstrom, giant Minneapolis Swede who has defeated all opposition given him since he came to the northwest last December, will tangle with another behemoth of the mat, Hans Steinke, 245-pound German, in the semi-windup of five ten-minute rounds.

Joe Parelli, former middleweight champion of the world and now rated as the "kingpin" of Pacific Coast middleweights will meet the clever John Nemanic, Colorado, in the special even of five six-minute rounds, while Des Anderson, favorite with northwest wrestling fans, tangles with Jack Gorman, clever Texan, in the three six-minute round opener.

All in all, every bout on the programme is of Madison Square Garden proportions. Londos, Coleman, Steinke, Jerlstrom have all headlined cards in the big city and are rated as four of the best wrestlers in the country.

Frankie Petrolle Defeats Battalino

New York, July 20—Frankie Petrolle, younger brother of the more famous Billy, made it four straight for the Petrolle family over Bat Battalino, former featherweight champion, by winning a ten-round decision at the Queensboro Stadium yesterday evening.

It was Frankie's second victory over the Hartford, Conn., battler, who previously had lost twice to Billy Petrolle.

Battalino looked like a winner yesterday evening until he ran smack into Petrolle's right fist in a four-round mixup, and went down for a count of nine. The blow slowed him down considerably for a few rounds, and by the time he recovered, Frankie had piled up enough points to win. Each weighed 141.

Hornsby Will Leave Title Winning Task To His Youngsters

Manager of Chicago Cubs Benches Himself and Puts Stanley Hack Back at Third Place; Hornsby, After Four Days, Decides He Is About Through; Cubs Whip Giants to Gain on Pittsburgh Who Split Pair of Games; Yankees Continue Winning Ways in American

Having made what many predict was his valedictory as an active player, Rogers Hornsby, one of the greatest infielders of all time, has turned the job of winning the National League flag over to his youngsters.

The Rajah, dissatisfied with Stanley Hack's play at third, stepped in to plug the hole, but after five days he is back on the bench. In the last four games, the once peerless batsman collected only two hits and his fielding was a thing of the past.

With the youthful Hack back in the line-up yesterday and the batting order juggled, the Cubs took a close one from the New York Giants, 5 to 4, and gained a half-game on the leading Pittsburgh Pirates, who were splitting even with the Phillies. That left the Chicagoans only two games behind.

Bill Swift pitched the Pirates to a 5 to 2 victory in their first bout with the Phils, but the eastern delegates came back to take the nightcap, 6 to 5, in eleven innings.

CARDS BEAT VANCE

St. Louis Cardinals, after being held to one hit for five innings, drove Dazzy Vance from the box in the seventh and defeated Brooklyn Dodgers, 5 to 3.

Playing without the injured Babe Ruth, the New York Yankees took their fourth straight from Chicago Sox, 6 to 3, with Lefty Gomez hanging up his sixteenth victory.

Wes Ferrell yielded only four scattered hits as Cleveland Indians blanked Boston, 7 to 0. Ferrell thus came into his seventeenth victory, which tops both leagues.

Philadelphia Athletics slugged out two decisions over St. Louis, 9 to 8 and 16 to 6. The Browns have lost ten straight.

AMERICAN LEAGUE

New York, July 20.—Lefty Vernon Gomez had little trouble yesterday winning his sixteenth victory of the season, defeating the Chicago White Sox, 6 to 3, with a seven-hit performance. It was the Yanks' fourth straight over Chicago. Joe Sewell hit his eighth homer of the season in the fifth inning for the winning tally after the Sox had scored all their runs in the fourth on two singles, Chapman's error and Grube's double.

New York	6	9	2

Batteries — Frasier, Faber, Gregory and Grube; Gomez and Jorgens.

Philadelphia, July 20.—The Philadelphia Athletics slugged their way to two victories over the St. Louis Browns yesterday, 9 to 8 in the first game and 16 to 6 in the nightcap. The A's had a total of 29 hits in the two games. Jimmy Foxx, with a home run inside the park in the second game, boosted his season's total to 39. Roger Cramer had four hits in five times at bat in the first game and duplicated the feat in the second contest.

The second game became Rube Walberg's ninth success of the year. Earnshaw went along smoothly in the first game, holding the Browns to six hits and two runs in the first seven innings. Then he blew, and for the second straight day Grove was sent to the rescue. He received credit for his fourteenth victory of the season.

First game—	R.	H.	E.

Second game—	R.	H.	E.
St. Louis	6	12	1
Philadelphia	16	14	1

Batteries — Hadley, Herbert, Cooney and Bengough; Walberg and Cochrane.

Boston, July 20.—Wes Ferrell hung up his seventeenth victory of the year and his first shutout by letting the Red Sox down with four hits yesterday. The score was 7 to 0. Connolly, Sox catcher, made two of the four singles, the first coming in the sixth inning to break any chance of a no-hit game. Cleveland practically won in the first frame when they made three runs off Bob Weiland.

Boston	0	4	1

Batteries — Ferrell and Sewell; Weiland, Durham, Jablonowski and Connolly.

Washington, July 20.—The Washington Senators continued their losing streak yesterday, dropping the third straight game to Detroit 3 to 2 on Sam Rice's day, in honor of the veteran Washington fielder.

Detroit	3	14	0
Washington	2	9	1

NATIONAL LEAGUE

Pittsburgh, July 20. — The league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates lost a half game in the pennant race yesterday by splitting a double-header with the Phillies while the Chicago Cubs were downing the New York Giants. Bill Swift won the first game, 5 to 2, his tenth win of the season and his seventh in a row. Pitcher Rip Collins tripled in the eleventh and scored on Bartell's single to take the second game 6 to 5.

First game—	R.	H.	E.

Batteries—Rhem, Benge, Collins and V. Davis; Spencer Terris, Hagnon and Padrew, Grece.

Chicago, July 20. — The New York Giants scored a run in the ninth inning yesterday to tie the Cubs at 4 to 4, but Chicago came right back with another tally to win 5 to 4 and to present Lon Warneke with his fourteenth victory of the season and his seventh in a row. Warneke pitched a fine game in an uphill fight after the first inning. He got off to a bad start when Mel Ott clouted his seventeenth home run of the season with two on base in the first, but after that blow he gave only two more hits up to the eighth. Fred Fitzsimmons was not quite steady enough to hold the lead Ott gave him. He wabbled in the third and the sixth. Sam Gibson, third Giant pitcher, was the victim of the winning rally in the ninth.

Chicago	5	11	2

Batteries—Fitzsimmons, Schumacher, Gibson and Hogan, O'Farrell; Warneke and Hartnett.

Cincinnati, July 20.—A last-minute flurry by the Cincinnati Reds wilted away in the heat of the sun yesterday and Ed Brandt pitched Boston to another victory, 2 to 0, over the National League's tailenders. Douthit and Morrissey singled in the last half of the ninth, but Grandt, going strong, made the next two pop out to win. Lucas, meanwhile, had dropped enough to allow two doubles to be built into a two-run margin.

Canadian Oarsmen Make Fast Times In Olympic Trials

Leander Eight and Vancouver Doubles In Brilliant Form

Former Crew From Hamilton Turn in Fastest Time Ever Recorded in North America; DeMille and Pratt Cover Distance in 6.36, Nearly as Fast as Winning Halifax Four; All Three Crews and Joe Wright, Winner of Singles, Going to Olympiad

Port Dalhousie, Ont., July 20—The east to-day had earned the right to carry Canada's outstanding bid in rowing to the Los Angeles Olympic games. Hamilton Leanders, Joe Wright Jr., a Halifax four-oared shell and Vancouver's sensational doubles, Noel de Mille and Ned Pratt, won the right to wear the Maple Leaf yesterday at the trials over old Henley here.

The crimson Leander crew, easily the greatest eight-oared outfit developed in Canada since the Argonaut boat-load of 1928, won what was expected to be a close race in such brilliant fashion that a western opponent and two other eastern foes were downed with hardly a struggle.

Bronzed Joe Wright captured the single event in a manner more than usually impressive, even for the colourful Argo star, former winner of the Diamond Sculls, he came from behind to trounce Don Wallace, Halifax, Charlie Stark, Montreal Lachine, and Johnny Durham, Toronto Dons, less than an hour and a half after rowing in the Argonaut eight-boat.

WINNIPEG COLLAPSE

Vancouver's triumph in the doubles, fully expected by fans who had watched the far westeners work out over the old Welland Canal course, was marked up as Bob Richards and Theo Dubois, Winnipeg, their only opponents, sat quietly in their almost-still boat — Richards nearly unconscious from exhaustion.

One of the best singles scullers in Canada, Richards helped propel the Winnipeg boat at a pace that equalled the speed of the British Columbia shell, but 200 yards from the finish, just as De Mille and Pratt started to put on a spring, Richards collapsed. The Vancouver pair were caught in the remarkable time of 6.36 for the Olympic 2,000 metres.

Leanders' time in the eights was announced as the fastest ever recorded on this continent, 5 minutes 49 4-5 seconds. Argos were second and Winnipeg third.

Victory of Halifax Mic Macs in the four-oared event without coxswain, almost failed to put the Bluenose oarsmen on the Olympic team. They made a great finish to beat Argonauts by a quarter length in 6.24, but the time was not considered good. The fact they had wandered from their course, however, caused the Olympic committee to change its decision, after announcing the crew would not be sent to Los Angeles.

POOR STEERING

The maritime boat wandered off the course at one stage and would have finished in a fast time except for poor steering. The rowers selected for the Olympic squad will leave with the track and field men and other athletes of Canada, Great Britain, South Africa, Hungary and Belgium Thursday night for California.

U.S. Boxers Seek Positions on Team

San Francisco, July 20.—In this city by the Golden Gate, once the hub of boxing, the pick of the country's amateur ring men will gather this evening for the opening of a three-night session of leather gloves out of which will spring the U.S. team for the forthcoming Olympic Games.

From the eastern seaboard to that far-flung outpost, Hawaii, are assembled the Simon-pures of twenty states and a territory. Nearly a hundred strong, they will parade their fistic wares in a classic that has no precedent.

It will be the first time the selection of an American Olympic team has been an "open house" affair. Heretofore, the eight performers were National A.A.U. champions.

LAWN BOWLING

Nearly 100 players took part in the game at the Burnside lawn bowling greens yesterday evening in aid of the fund to provide prizes for the annual Victoria tournament next month. It was the largest crowd of bowlers ever seen on the Saanich green. Teams had to be arranged five a side, instead of the usual four. Great interest is being taken in the coming event, when visitors are expected from all parts of Canada and the United States.

The high rink yesterday evening was skipped by J. Renfrew, Burnside, and was made up of Mrs. J. L. White (Victoria), Mr. Shotbolt (C.P.), Mr. Fraser (Victoria West) and Mr. Byng (Burnside).

All Favorites Advance Easily in Second Day's Play of B.C. Clay Court Championships at Vancouver; Elmer Griffin, U.S. Veteran, Pressed to Defeat Sidaway, 9-7, 6-4; Prusoff and Murio Victors; Prusoff Meets Dunc Cameron, North Vancouver Youngster, To-day

Vancouver, July 20—Second day of the British Columbia clay court championships went along much as they were expected yesterday at Jericho with the stars seeded in the draw winning handily in all their matches. Only one match in the men's singles went the limit in sets.

Elmer Griffin, brother of Peck, who partnered with little Bill Johnson in more than one American doubles championship, had to step to win his match, although he took it in straight sets. Griffin is reaching the veteran class in tennis. Ten years ago he played his best tennis at Forest Hills.

He was up against Sidway, who provided more than the star had bargained for. Sidway took him to 9-7 in the first set, the second set found Griffin bearing down more, and it was in doubt until the latter had put it away 6-4.

Dunc Cameron, a young comer from North Vancouver, got through the second round yesterday in a strenuous three-match set, which put George Yoshy, Japanese star, out of the running. Cameron took the first set, dropped the second to the Nippon star and finished the match with some sparkling net play in the final set.

WILL MEET PRUSOFF

To-night he meets Prusoff of Seattle, who is seeded first in the draw. The latter had an easy win yesterday, losing only four games in two sets. John Muris, who is seeded at the bottom of the draw, had a likewise victory.

Brawn, Shields, Williams and Sparling of the local force of single stars, were all sucessful in their matches, getting by with little or no trouble.

Robb, Portland, formerly a member of the South African Davis Cup team, had an easy win, and so did Goldman, a hard-hitting junior from California, Budge, the young red-headed sensation, continued his easy going to the second round, making short work of George McLean.

To-day an exhibition match is billed at 3 o'clock. Shimura, Nippon star from San Francisco, who is heralded as the Pacific Coast Japanese champ, will meet George Yoshy.

No matches have yet been played in the men's doubles or in the mixed doubles divisions. First round games are billed to-day.

First round matches in the women's singles were as uneventful as the men. Doc Swartz, seeded first among the femmes, has not had a match yet.

MISS WHEELER ADVANCES

Three matches in the women's doubles went the limit of three sets. Marjorie Greig and Phylis White won the final two sets to defeat Misses Jean and Susie Milne, while Misses Cole and Keir beat Mrs. Carter and Mrs. Smart in three sets.

Theodosa Smith and Edith Lough of California were taken to three sets by Francis Fraser and Miss Robinson, 6-3, 5-7, 6-4.

Lacrosse Players Are Heading West

Toronto, July 20—Bound for Los Angeles where they hope to win points for Canada, seven sturdy members of eastern Canada's contribution to the all-star Canadian lacrosse team are en route to Vancouver to-day.

In company with A. E. Lyon, president of the Canadian Amateur Lacrosse Association, the squad left here yesterday evening for the west, where they will join the remainder of the all-star team before traveling to Los Angeles to compete in the international games.

Listed among the seven are Jack Worthy and Hal Wallace, Hamilton; Joe Bergin and Jack Russell, Fergus; Matt Rohmer, Organveille; Norman Gair and William "Duke" Harrison, Mimico.

Valparaiso, Ind., July 20.—With the thermometer near 100 degrees, John McCaferty, who will be 101 years old in October, outlasted two young huskies at mowing oats. The centenarian, who lives near Valparaiso, works regularly at a blacksmith's forge.

ATHLETES GET COLD WEATHER

California Climate Fails to Warm Up For Visiting Olympic Games Stars

Population of Olympic Village Almost Doubled By Yesterday's Arrivals

Los Angeles, July 30.—Athletes of the world are getting a cold reception at the Olympic village, but it is the climate, not United States hospitality.

One of the first worries displayed by team managers on arrival here has been the question of the heat; but now they are asking for extra blankets to the point that the village supply is getting low.

When the first Argentina contingent put in several weeks ago, the athletes who had left winter behind asked Juan Zabala, their forerunner, the marathon star, about the nights. Zabala shivered and said: "Muy Krio." His teammates thought it was a great joke, for the afternoon was warm.

Now more than 700 atheletes from the far reaches of the world are picking themselves up a good California tan, only to pull the covers up to their ears at night.

The population of the Olympic village was almost doubled the first days of the current week as many of the larger teams moved up on the pending international athletic carnival. France, Finland, Sweden and Poland put in an appearance yesterday, raising the total number on flags at the athletes' village to twenty-four.

Forty-nine nations are expected to compete, but only about forty-five are entered in the sports events. The others are participating only in art exhibits.

TO-DAY'S ARRIVALS

To-day's list of arrivals expected include a team of five from Norway and the United States swimming team. The first members of the United States track and field team slipped in without warning yesterday. Included in the group were five southern Californians, Bill Graber, Bob Vanosdel, Dick Barber, Frank Wykoff and Ed Ablowitch, who during their training grind this spring cast longing glances at the village, hoping their dream of living within its confines would come true.

Shoulder Starts Cruickshank "Pull"

By JOE GLASS

To insure complete control in the downward pull of the left arm in the mashie swing the pull must start with the left shoulder. The player should practice this initiative movement carefully, for it is an antidote for the duffer's eager impulse to start hitting at the top of the swing and it blocks the right hand taking control, with a slice resulting.

If a strong left shoulder pull be made, the hands will be "dragged" down through the proper arc and with the left hand in control and supplying the power. This "drag" will continue until the hands are about opposite the right knee. Then the left wrist, which has been broken since the cocking operation at the top of the swing, will straighten out. The swing through the ball will follow, as Bobby Cruickshank does it in the sketch.

Be sure not to confuse this left shoulder pull with body pull. If the body pulls, sway will result. Shoulder pull will be merely a pivotal movement and the arc of the swing will remain intact.

It would be necessary to build 240,000 additional homes in London if every family were to be provided with a separate home.

AUSTRALIANS IN FINE WIN

Bradman and McCabe Provide Batting Features; Leave For Detroit

Livingston, Staten Island, N.Y., July 20.—The Australian cricket team won their final game against time, at Livingston, Staten Island, yesterday, by performing the almost impossible feat of scoring 152 runs in seventy minutes, which netted a victory of seven wickets against a picked New York team.

Declaring their innings closed with 151 runs for eleven wickets, the New York skipper thought he was on the safe side, but reckoned without some very vigorous batting by the famous Don Bradman and R. N. Nutt, who put on 91 runs for the second wicket partnership in half an hour, and paved the way for the brilliant victory. Bradman made 57 runs in faultless style, while Nutt carried out his bat for a well-played innings of 69, which included nine 4s.

Three wickets were down for 164 when Captain Richardson came in, and he laid the wood on to such an extent that the necessary runs were piled up with only two minutes remaining.

Fleetwood-Smith was the most successful Australian bowler with six wickets for 41, Stan McCabe getting two for 25 and Don Bradman two for 27.

Yesterday evening the Australian players were the guests of the United States Cricket Association at a farewell banquet at the New York Athletic Club and after seeing the Yankees and Chicago baseball game to-day, will leave for Detroit and Chicago before returning to Canada to continue their tour.

KID M'COY TO LEAVE PRISON

Former Welterweight Champ Will Be Given Parole; Will Work For Ford

San Francisco, July 20—Kid McCoy, once welterweight champion of the world, but for six years just a drab figure in the big concrete penitentiary at San Quentin, was ready to-day to enter the industrial ring—he had an offer of a job at the Ford Motor Company plant at Detroit.

The job offer made possible a parole for McCoy, whose real name is Norman Selby. He was imprisoned on a manslaughter conviction in connection with the death in Los Angeles, eight years ago, of his asserted sweetheart, Mrs. Theresa Mors.

The announcement of McCoy's "break" came yesterday from Ed Whyte, state parole officer, who earlier had announced he possibly would take a job in New York State, in a restaurant at Saratoga Springs. The Ford offer was favored by the parole office, he said, because of the requirements of the office governing men on parole.

McCoy will be an instructor at the Ford plant in physical training.

Even Horses Have Their Bad Breaks

By AL DEMAREE

The biggest field of all time started in the Grand National steeplechase in England in 1929, with sixty-six thoroughbreds starting at the barrier. The race was won by Gregalach. Of the sixty-six starters, twenty-one fell, four were pulled up and one refused a jump. The rest finished.

Billie's Orphan, a recent winner at Lexington and a good juvenile racer, was raised on a bottle. His dam, Billy O, died three days after foaling him, hence the name.

African was probably the hardest luck stake horse of all time. He started in eighteen stake races in 1929, but could not win one of them, although he finished second or third in all of them and received in prize money $22,958.

THE GILLETTE
BLUE SUPER-BLADE

GILLETTE'S announcement of the Gillette Blue Super-Blade replacing the $2 Kroman De Luxe at half the price was welcome to shavers throughout the Dominion. It meant that almost any man can now afford utmost shaving ease and convenience. Here is a far superior blade offered at a figure possible only because of volume production and general acceptance.

The Blue Super-Blade is of extraordinary quality—a smoother shaving instrument made in addition to the regular blade in the green package. Men who insist upon the peak of performance are glad to pay its slight extra cost. This blade is heavier, sturdy—made of blue steel with rustless finish.

An entirely new manufacturing method—devised by the new management—assures uniform quality and a degree of keenness never before possible. Automatic grinding, honing, finishing and stropping are so arranged that careful inspection can follow every operation. Every reel of steel is tested for flaws by an exclusive photo-electric process. The outside sections of the blade are harder than the flexing center. This results in a blade soft enough in the middle to bend easily without distortion while the outside, of an entirely different temper, takes and holds extremely keen shaving edges. Patents already granted the Gillette Safety Razor Company protect this important feature.

You'll find shaving far more comfortable when you use the Blue Super-Blade. Try it soon. It is easy to identify—contained in a blue package, Cellophane wrapped. Buy a supply today. On sale everywhere, $1 for 10, 50¢ for 5.

Wheat Advances To Higher Levels On Winnipeg Market

Winnipeg, July 20 (Canadian Press).—Responsive to a revival of export trade and encouraged by higher wheat quotations at Liverpool, wheat advanced to higher levels in the pit to-day. Prices at the close were ½ cent higher for the day.

Opening strong on improved sentiment from overseas, wheat held fair gains at mid-season, receded fractionally and then rallied to higher ground on a burst of short covering near the close. It was estimated 500,000 bushels of Canadian wheat had been worked for export. Cables from Liverpool indicated the trade was divided equally between the United Kingdom and the continent.

Substantial export and unfavorable crop news from the Balkan countries and the United States spring wheat states were responsible for the rise at Liverpool. Rust appears to have done considerable damage to Balkan wheat crops and estimates of the surplus are as low as 16,000,000 bushels, compared with 40,000,000 last season. Cash wheat and coarse grains were dull. Spreads of about one cent better were obtainable on durums.

To-day's Grain Markets

WINNIPEG

(By Logan & Bryan)

Winnipeg, July 20.—Wheat: Stronger than due cables, with some export overnight has given the wheat market firmer tone during the first period when prices advanced ¾ over the close last night. However, the bulge was not held, the market turning extremely quiet after the early buying was satisfied with Winnipeg more or less being effected by the trend in Chicago. Chicago also advanced ¾ during the first period but later broke 1¼ from the high marks, while Minneapolis broke 1½ cents from the high of the day. Figures on exports were not available but the business was not large, probably 250,000 bushels. There was very little selling pressure on this market but it was evident that the buying power was not sufficient to hold the upturns. In the cash market there was only a fair demand, but there was not much wheat changing hands. No. 2 northern continues to be not wanted.

Offerings were not pressing and spreads were unchanged. Unfavorable crop reports continue to come in from those American experts who are now touring Western Canada, but their reports do not coincide by private reports being received by line elevator companies from their agents. In other words the crop experts are finding considerable more deterioration than is generally believed to have taken place. Rians or showers were practically general over the west the past twenty-four hours, and further thunder storms and moderately warm temperatures were forecast.

Liverpool closed 1⅜ to 1½ higher and Buenos Aires was ¼ to ⅜ higher at noon. Country marketings in the west on Tuesday were 168,000 bushels vs. 247,000 a year ago. Winnipeg futures closed firm with a little short covering by those who had been pressing the market based on weakness in Chicago and final figures were ½ to ⅝ higher, while Chicago closed ⅝ to ½ lower. Winnipeg October has now widened out to ten cents over Chicago September.

Coarse Grains—These markets, while firm, were very quiet with nothing of feature going on outside of spreading operations, seaboard reported a little export business in rye, but it was not reflected here. There was no pressure on these markets. Oats closed ½ higher to unchanged, barley ⅛ to ⅝ higher, and rye ½ to ⅞ higher.

Liverpool due ⅛ to ¼ higher on Winnipeg.

CHICAGO

(By Logan & Bryan)

Chicago, July 20.—Wheat: Prospects of more favorable weather took the edge off the wheat market and after a further rally early, prices sold off with lack of support, final figures being around half cent under yesterday's final. Western Canada had some moisture with moderate temperatures and the northwest showed light rains forecast. The buying demand was checked by appearance of hedging sales on the rally and market failed to get much outside buying support. Receipts here 171 cars estimated with primary arrivals 1,903,000 bushels vs. 4,445,000 a year ago.

Clearances to-day 840,000 bushels. Strong cables helped the market, early Liverpool closing 1⅜ to 1½ higher and reported a better general demand. Balkan reports were bullish indicating a small exportable surplus while Russian offerings are small. Canadian reports indicate a little deterioration in the wheat crop as a whole but the situation is not deemed at all serious. German reports indicated a serious political situation developing. The wheat situation is well balanced but the market needs better support to absorb any heavy traffic. However think the setbacks will witness a good class of buying.

Corn—The market was strong early, but later sold off with wheat. Shipping demand only fair also country sales also moderate, offerings being held a little over the market generally. Receipts here 123 cars estimated and primary arrivals 299,000 bushels vs. 787,000 a year ago. Weather was hot over the belt, but indications were for a change to cooler and more unsettled conditions. It is not believed corn has been damaged much by heat as yet, but unless the heat wave abates there probably will be some complaint. Until there is some indication of real damage, think rallies will be hard to hold.

Oats—Country offerings were fair, and there was not much activity in the demand. Cash demand only fair. Receipts are running quite well for this season, being considerably larger than a year ago.

Rye—Trade light. Germany reported as a buyer of some Canadian rye. There was a little support early on the firmness in wheat but the market was rather heavy later.

MONTREAL HAS STRONGER TONE

Montreal, July 20 (Canadian Press)—The Montreal Stock Exchange turned strong in late trading to-day, after a rather soft trend in the morning. Favorable Wall Street advices had a good influence.

Consolidated Smelters and Dominion Bridge featured the session with considerable advances. Smelters was up 5 points to 55. Dominion Bridge was 2½ higher at 16 in following the dividend declaration yesterday which was more favorable than expected.

Montreal Power and Steel of Canada were others to gain. Power closed at 31¾, up ¾, and Steel at 15¾, also up ¾. Canadian Pacific reached a high of 12⅝ during the day, but closed at 12½, unchanged.

BANK STOCKS STILL UNSETTLED

In the banks, Bank of Montreal continued to react to yesterday's unfavorable dividend announcement, losing 10 to 170. Royal Bank on odd lots was up to 145 and Bank of Nova Scotia unchanged at 247.

SMELTERS LEADS TORONTO MART

Toronto, July 20—Still under the leadership of Smelters in the afternoon session, Toronto Stock Exchange showed a sizeable gain of more than six points in the leader but an irregular market over the broad list.

Dominion Bridge was up more than a point above 15, Hamilton Bridge up a fraction and National Steel Car up on the day. F. N. Burt gained a point, Ford of Canada was firm and up slightly. Steel of Canada up half a point and the foods and chain store stocks strong. Smelters reached 55½ in the last few minutes.

Against these gains were fractional losses in Bell Telephone, C.P.R., Brazilian, Shawinigan, Canada Cement, (common), the farm implement stocks and the oils.

Bank stocks sold lower. Bank of Toronto at 155 was off ten points, Canadian Bank of Commerce at 135 off five points and Imperial off 1 at 152 and Nova Scotia off 3 at 245. Canada Cement preferred advanced one-half point to above 35.

LAKE SHORE HITS NEW HIGH

Canadian Press

Toronto, July 20.—While the Standard Stock and Mining Exchange market lost some of its early strength in late trading to-day, the list retained an irregularly higher appearance on end.

Lake Shore gave the best performance, jumping 70 cents to a new high for the year to date. McIntyre, which established a new 1932 peak of $20.50 in early sales, reacted later but showed a small gain at the close. Teck-Hughes, Granada, Siscoe, Arno, Tashota and Kirk Townsite recorded fractional gains.

Noranda sold off a little after midday, but held a net gain of 30. Nickel and Hudson Bay showed small losses. Silvers were inactive and practically unchanged.

In the oil section Olga and Pen Pete made small gains, while Chemical Research dipped 10 and Oil Selections a fraction.

Associated Press

New York, July 20.—The stock market pushed quietly forward to-day. Final prices were shaded somewhat by late realizing, but a number of the leaders closed up one to nearly two points. The closing tone was firm. The turnover approximated 600,000 shares.

Extreme gains of 1¾ points in U.S. Steel preferred and American Tobacco "B" were cut in half, and Union Pacific slid back a fraction after rising more than two. Such issues as American Can, American Telephone, Coco Cola and Santa Fe were up a point or more.

The turnover in shares remained small, but shorts seeking to retire their commitments found nearby offerings scarce, and prices quickly rose a point or more in several of the leaders.

There was some recession in the middle of the day, but the list stiffened again in the early afternoon.

Shares rising a point or more included such issues as American Telephone, Allied Chemical, Consolidated Gas, Case, American Tobacco "B," Liggett & Myers "B," Brooklyn Manhattan, Public Service of N.J., Auburn, Santa Fe and Union Pacific. U.S. Steel was up a fraction. Penney and McKeesport were isolated soft spots, off more than a point.

The meeting of the Railway Executives' Association to discuss measures to ameliorate the situation of the carriers was watched with considerable interest.

To-day's stock sales by Logan & Bryan were: Allied Chemical 19,300, American Can 18,500, American Tobacco "B" 9,400, American Tel. and Tel. 16,700, Atchison 11,000, United Aircraft 8,900, Auburn 12,000, J. I. Case 16,300, Coca Cola 4,900, Cons. Gas 6,100, Corn Prods. 2,300, DuPont 8,800, General Electric 20,400, General Motors 8,700, McKeesport 6,300, National Biscuit 4,900, N.Y. Central 7,500, Sears Roebuck 4,400, Standard Oil, N.J., 9,700, Union Car. and Carbon, 2,600, Union Pacific 11,000, U.S. Indus. Alcohol 2,000, U.S. Steel 10,700, Westinghouse Elec. 4,000, Woolworth 9,400, Loew's Inc. 2,500.

PRICES STEADY AT VANCOUVER

Canadian Press

Vancouver, July 20.—Apart from a three-point fluctuation in Premier Gold, there was little price change on the Vancouver market during the forenoon.

Premier spurted to a high at 52 in the early trading, but weakened later and fell off to close at 49 on a turnover for the day of 2,700 shares.

Pioneer held at 3.70 unchanged, while Lornie, after weakening slightly to about midsession, when it was available at 7¾, recovered to close at 8 cents. Pend Oreille was moderately active at 50 cents.

Sales this morning were:

Mines—3,000 Beaver Silver at 4; 2,500 Bridge River Con. at 4¼; 200 Lorne Gold at 6; 100 Pend Oreille at 50; 100 Pioneer Gold at 370.

OFFICE CLOSED FOR ECONOMY

Alberni Closes City Hall Two Days Weekly to Conserve Funds

Alberni, July 20.—The city council on Monday evening struggled to reconcile a dwindling bank account with pressing necessities. After paying approved accounts amounting to $2,270, only $1,935 remained on hand of tax collections amounting to $9,526. This income was $1,200 below the receipts recorded at the same time last year and the city clerk was pessimistic regarding prospects for further revenue.

The council was reminded that the appropriation for sinking funds had not been made, that unpaid accounts on hand required $1,000 and there was a prospect of $1,800 being necessary for relief in the next six months.

The mayor and Alderman Bigmore were confident that all obligations would be taken care of before the end of the year, but the council ordered closure of the city hall each Wednesday and Saturday, with a corresponding reduction in the clerk's salary, and placed the city foreman upon a four-day week, at a wage of $4 a day.

John Benjamin, secretary of the Alberni and District Workers' Association, personally presented a letter inviting the council to attend a meeting of unemployed. Alderman Mrs. Randerson urged adoption of a scheme of works to remove the uncertainty facing workless men. Her statement that the council was being accused of "sidestepping" and "passing the buck" was warmly resented, the mayor stating that the council were fully cognizant of the situation, and hampered only by financial considerations.

Alderman Howe reported seven permits given for wood cutting for private use and supported an application from John Grieve for the purchase of timber on city lands for making piling, final action being that anyone will be allowed to purchase the timber in question at the rate offered of 25c per tree.

The Alberni Board of Trade was given permission to use a portion of the city park for an auto camp.

North Vancouver Goes After Taxes

North Vancouver District, July 20.—North Vancouver District intends to collect all taxes that are collectable. After Reeve J. M. Bryan had declared yesterday evening that a number of citizens were purposely withholding last year's and previous year's taxes, the municipal council unanimously passed a motion that the proper officials be authorized to take any legal steps necessary to collect them.

At What Age Shall Man Marry? | Dorothy Dix | Advises Waiting for Maturity

Wait Until You Are Grown Up Before You Take a Wife, Is Dorothy Dix's Advice to Young Men; Nearly Every Letter From an Unhappy Husband Lays Blame for Incompatibility on Too-early Marriage

THERE are no questions that men ask me often than:

What age should a man be when he marries?

How much money should he have before he marries?

These are queries that cannot be answered categorically, for marriage is one of the things to which there are a thousand exceptions to every rule. You can't give any recipe for making a happy marriage as you can for making a sponge cake and say: "Put this in it and do thus and so and it cannot fail." For into every marriage goes that mysterious, unknown, human ingredient that flavors it, but whose effect upon it no one is wise enough to foretell.

All of us have seen marriages that defied every law of even the probability of success that turned out gloriously happy, and we have seen other marriages that seemed to be made in heaven that landed both the man and woman in a hell on earth.

So you can lay down no hard-and-fast rule for the time a man should marry nor for how much money he should have in the bank. So many other factors are to be considered. The man's real age rather than his chronological age, for some men mature much faster than others. There enter into it also the tastes and habits of the man and the girl he has picked out for a wife, and especially how the girl has been brought up and the standard to which she has been accustomed to live, for some men are senile at twenty and others mere laughing lads at seventy, and the income that would seem riches to one couple spells penury to another.

But while you cannot put a strict age limit on matrimony for a man, chances for being happy in marriage are increased 100 per cent if he waits until he is fully matured before he takes unto himself a wife. Boy-girl marriages are nearly always disastrous, for if they do not end in divorce, as they so often do, they are virtually sure to degenerate into a dull passive endurance of a life partner whom he has outgrown and with whom he has nothing in common.

Among the thousands of letters that I get from unhappy husbands, nearly every one begins with: "I married too young. I married when I was just a boy." Then the writers go on to tell what is really the most tragic story in the world, because it is the story of a fine man torn between his sense of obligation and honor and his passionate desire for a little happiness in the life that he sees slipping from him and his pity for the good wife he must hurt unless he utterly sacrifices himself on the altar of the mistake of his youth.

For he realizes that the childish sweetheart he married is not to blame for the situation. She is just what she always was. Just what she was when he married her. She is sweet and domestic and dull and she bores him to extinction because he has developed and the world has educated him, while she has learned nothing.

He has gone forward and she has stayed up. And, inevitably, he has found a woman who is his real mate. The woman who satisfies his mature tastes and needs. And he is bound to the corpse of a dead love and there is heartbreak all around.

Check up on the philandering husbands and the middle-aged men who swap old wives for new and you will find that nearly every one of them married too soon.

Nothing would do more to stop divorce than for men to wait until they really knew what sort of wives they really wanted or what kind of women they were going to want to spend their lives with before they married them. Instead of waiting until afterward to discover that they had made mistakes. The boy who marries the first girl he thinks he falls in love with is as sure to regret his choice as he would be if he spent all his money on the first article he saw in a store. Luck might be with him and she might really be a good selection, but he would always wish he had looked 'em over before he made his pick.

The man who waits until he is nearing thirty before he marries is far more apt to make a wise selection of a wife than a boy does. His fancy is not so easily caught by glitter as a boy's. He looks to the wearing qualities and the suitability of the woman he picks out as well as to her paint and her streamline effects. Nor is he so easily befooled by a designing woman. In a word, he has learned about woman from the various hers he has met in playing around and is able to form a fairly accurate estimate not only as to how one will look in a drawing-room but how she will perform in a kitchen and how well suited she will be to him.

Another argument in favor of a man not rushing precipitately into marriage in his boyhood is that happiness in marriage depends entirely upon his point of view. Home is a jail to him if he is longing all the time to be out making whoopee with the boys and girls. It is a haven of refuge and the dearest spot on earth if he is sick and tired of all the blare and blah, the synthetic drinks, the wild women, the headache and the dark brown taste of night life. No man should marry until he is good and ready to settle down.

But, on the other hand, it does not do for a man to wait too long to get married. The wedding cake kept too long on the shelf grows stale. Romance fades with the years. Women come to look like women and not like angels. Habits become ways that are dearer than any Lady Love. He gets too old to learn new tricks and no wife can teach him to jump through the domestic hoop, so marriage is a mistake to him and a curse to the woman he marries.

So it all may be summed up into this: That a man should wait to marry until he is old enough to know his own mind and trust his own tastes and young enough to be capable of thrills and dreams. And, as nearly as you can place it, that halcyon age is between twenty-five and thirty.

Adventure of the Sea

III—THE PLAN

(The story so far: Capt. Thompson, sixty-eight years old, lost his position with the steamship company, and was thinking of selling an old steamer which he owned, until his grandson, Allen, reminded him of a trip he had planned to an island of the sea.)

After Allen reminded him of the trip to the island, Capt. Thompson's whole manner changed. Here was a chance to build his fortune over again!

"To-day," said the captain, "I have an amazing story to tell you"

With a smile on his face, he bade the boy good-bye and ventured forth to visit three of his friends and to invite them to dine with him at the Old Masthead restaurant.

Early that evening, two sailors joined Capt. Thompson and First Mate Brown at the Old Masthead. After they had finished their meal, the captain said to them:

"To-day I have an amazing story to tell you, and I want you to keep it secret. Five years ago, while I was sailing across the South Atlantic, between Africa and South America, we hit upon a shoal about a mile off the coast of a small island. This island looked like a group of rocks, but I had five hours' time before the tide would lift us off the shoal, and I spent part of it on a visit to the island.

"The sight I saw was like nothing else I have ever seen. All around were bones, big bones, small bones, skulls of animals which do not live to-day."

"Were they dinosaur bones?" asked First Mate Brown.

"Yes, I'm almost sure that's what they were. Most of them were stuck in the rocks, jutting out part way; but others had been washed free by the rains. I brought a few of those bones away with me, and I took some pictures of this rocky island. Here they are, you can see for yourselves."

The men looked at the picture with great interest.

"Now I'll tell you why I asked you to come here this evening. I am almost sure I can find that island again, and I want to go there.

"I've heard tell that that museums want bones of this kind, and to-morrow I'm going to the city and see the man in charge of the big museum there. If he agrees to buy these skeletons, I intend to make the trip to the island in my little old steamer."

GYPSIES TAKE MODERN TURN

Detroit, July 20.—Even the gypsies are going modern.

Turning their back on tradition, they have elected as their king a commoner, Steve Stanley, a graduate of New York City college, over the heir apparent, Joseph Marks, son of the late King Steve.

Upon his coronation the new King Steve served notice of drastic changes in the customs of his people. He will encourage education in trades and professions to take the place of fortune-telling, horse-trading and coppersmithing.

Moscow prisoners are employed for union hours at a reasonable wage, pay for their keep, and get two weeks' vacation every year.

Sheriff Seizes Boat

Ownership Case Is Pending

The Sheju, Dick Bird's thirty-five-foot power boat cruiser, has been removed under sheriff's custody from her mooring in the Inner Harbor to a berth at the Point Hope Marine Railway, it was learned yesterday.

Litigation is pending over a writ issued by Mrs. B. McAllister, 112 Cambridge Street, and C. L. Hosking, 1127 Fort Street, who claim part ownership.

TWO PARTIES COMING HERE

Ss. Lady Alexandra Due To-morrow With Tourists; Ss. Indianapolis Also Due

Princess Patricia to Visit Saanich Arm To-morrow; Jervis Inlet Cruise Popular

Two excursion ships are expected here to-morrow, both bringing large lists of passengers.

On her annual jaunt here from White Rock, a holiday resort near Vancouver, the Union steamer, Lady Alexandra, will arrive early in the afternoon with more than 500 people aboard. She will remain here all afternoon.

Making a call at Port Townsend on the way here from Seattle, the ferry steamer Indianapolis will also be a visitor in Victoria to-morrow. She is expected to bring upwards of 300 passengers.

To-morrow the Ss. Princess Patricia will take an excursion from Vancouver to Tod Inlet, at the far end of the Saanich Arm. The ship will tie up at the B.C. Cement Company's float, and two hours will be given the Vancouverites to wander through the famous Butchart Gardens, just now at the height of their summer glory.

To-day the Princess Patricia is on an excursion trip from Vancouver to New Westminster, and on Saturday she is scheduled to take her first "mystery trip." She will leave Vancouver under orders known only to her captain. This trip is expected to prove popular, and it is possible the "Pat" may take a similar outing from Victoria early in August.

Yesterday the Princess Charlotte, between Alaska trips, took 800 Vancouverites from Vancouver on an all-day cruise to Jervis Inlet, one of the coast's chief beauty spots not far from Vancouver. The weather was delightful, and the large flock of Vancouver people had a delightful day on the water.

Nearly 400 Victorians returned to Victoria late yesterday evening after a most enjoyable trip to Vancouver aboard the Ss. Princess Patricia. They left Victoria early in the morning and had delightful weather on both the going and return trips. Five hours were given the local people to visit friends in Vancouver, to see the shops or take drives about the city's beauty spots.

TO SEARCH FOR LOST TREASURE

Steamship Now Outfitting on East Coast to Salvage Jewels From Ocean's Floor

Norfolk, Va., July 20.—Treasure—gold and silver bullion and jewels worth from $4,000,000 to $6,000,000—is the object of a hunt off the Virginia Coast by Capt. Harry L. Bowdoin and a crew of twenty-four men aboard the steamship Salvor which was taking on supplies at this port to-day.

The dark depths of the Atlantic, thirty-five fathoms deep, have hidden the treasure for more than twenty years since the Mallory Line steamship Merida sank sixty-five miles off Cape Henry May 28, 1911, after being rammed by the Admiral Farragut. The treasure is said to contain some of the crown jewels of the ill-fated Empress Maximilian of Mexico.

CAPT. KANEKO IS HONORED

Heian Maru's Master Receives Italian Honor; Liner Due Next Tuesday Morning

Capt. Bunzaemon Kaneko, commander of the N.Y.K. motorliner Heian Maru, due at William Head on Friday, inbound from the Orient, and well known at this port, has been awarded a medal by the Navy Department of the Italian destroyer Muggia, which was wrecked off the south China coast in March, 1929.

Capt. Kaneko was, at the time, master of the freighter Matsumoto Maru. He, along with the first officer of that ship, the fourth officer and the radio operator, have been awarded silver medals, while bronze medals went to eleven members of the crew.

CAPT. B. KANEKO

Capt. Kaneko first came to Victoria three years ago as commander of the Ss. Siberia Maru. Later he was transferred to the Heian Maru when that ship made her maiden voyage across the Pacific. Shortly after his rescue of the Muggia crew he was decorated by King Victor Emmanuel of Italy. This decoration made him a commander of the Third Order of the Crown of Italy.

The Heian Maru will arrive at Ogden Point next Tuesday morning to take on 500,000 feet of Japanese squares for the Orient. She will remain here until Thursday evening before proceeding to Vancouver.

The ship is bringing in a total list of 104 passengers. Of these seven first class and twenty-four steerage will disembark at Vancouver, while sixteen first class, ten tourist cabin and thirty-seven steerage will proceed to Seattle. There are also 400 tons of general cargo aboard for Vancouver discharge.

Outbound to ports in Japan, the liner Yokohama Maru, of the same fleet, will sail from Ogden Point Saturday evening with a fair list of passengers and a capacity general cargo.

GRAIN CARGOES REMAIN HEAVY

Montreal, July 20. — Grain figures continue encouraging. While this time last year the trade had taken on a very lifeless appearance yesterday was a day of outstanding activity at Montreal elevators and a total of 1,016,393 bushels were delivered to ships for the United Kingdom and Europe. A year ago the total was only 255,513 bushels.

More than three-quarters of a million bushels were taken into the elevators in the last twenty-four hours, more than twice the quantity last year.

HEAVY LIST

The heavy steamship passenger season is not yet over, as will be seen by the number of passengers who sailed the other day on the Cunard liner Ausonia and the Anchor-Donaldson liner Letitia. Among notables sailing on the Cunarder were: Admiral C. E. Byron and Mrs. Byron of London, and Miss Florence M. Postill, secretary of the Canadian Y.M.C.A. Montrealers on the Ausonia included Dakers Cameron, Mrs. Jeffrey Cook, Dr. W. W. Eakin and Mrs. Eakin, Misses G. and R. Fish, Mr. and Mrs. A. J. G. Macduff, Antonio Perrault, K.C.; Hon. Justice G. Perrault, Mrs. Perrault, C. Perrault and W. M. Storper.

YACHT SHEJU IN LITIGATION

The thirty-five-foot cruiser Sheju, built in Victoria on a spare lot on Cambridge Street by Dick Bird, well-known local boat builder, was recently removed, under the custody of the sheriff, from her mooring at the Causeway to a berth at the Point Hope Shipyards in the upper inner harbor, pending litigation arising from a writ issued by Mrs. B. McAllister of 112 Cambridge Street, and C. L. Hosking of 1127 Fort Street, claiming part ownership.

The Sheju is one of the most beautifully built yachts of her size in Victoria. Mr. Bird built her over a period of four years. Since she was launched two years ago she has been on many short sea trips around Victoria.

STILL SEARCHING FOR COCOS ISLAND TREASURE

Treasure hunters on Cocos Island, in the Pacific Ocean, 600 miles off Costa Rica, are reported to have found a spot in a creek bed under which they believe lies the Devonshire treasure, buried by Capt. Graham of the British warship Devonshire after he towed plate many years ago. Above is shown the ship Silver Wave, in which the expedition set and in the inset is the vessel's skipper, Capt. Eldred Hanson. The map shows the location of Cocos Island where buccaneers of three centuries ago are supposed to have hidden tons of gold bullion and chests of coins seized from Spanish vessels.

AORANGI OUT THIS EVENING

Big Motor Liner Will Take 160 Passengers to Honolulu, Suva, Auckland and Sydney

Outbound to Honolulu, Suva, Auckland and Sydney, the Canadian Australasian motorliner Aorangi will sail from the Rithet piers this evening about 8 o'clock with 160 passengers in all classes and a good general cargo. Capt. W. Martin will be on the bridge, taking the place of the regular skipper, Capt. J. F. Spring-Brown, who is on shore vacation at his home in Sydney.

The Aorangi sailed from Vancouver at noon to-day and is expected to dock here shortly after 5 o'clock. She will pick up United States passengers and mails and light cargo here before putting to sea.

Among the passengers who will board the liner here this evening are Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Anderson of Linden Avenue, going to the Hawaiian Islands for a short summer vacation; Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Lockhead of Honolulu, returning to their mid-pacific home after a holiday in British Columbia; Mrs. K. L. Kewish and Miss K. Kewish going to Auckland and Miss J. McIvor returning to her home in Honolulu.

Passengers who sailed from Vancouver aboard the liner included A. L. Williams and F. E. Williams, prominent lumber dealers of Australia, returning to their home in Melbourne after a combined business and pleasure trip to Canada and the United States. They are accompanied by their wives.

Other passengers are E. T. Hindmarsh, representative in Auckland of the Asiatic Petroleum Company; Dr. D. D. Macdonald and Harry Charlesworth of Vancouver, going to Honolulu to attend the conference of the world's Federation of Education Associations, and F. F. Robinson, prominent sportsman of Australia. He is interested particularly in horses.

WANT JOBS ON PRINCE HENRY

Unemployed C.N.R. Dining Car Waiters Object to West Indians on Liner

Halifax, July 20—The District Trades and Labor Council has taken up the cause of a group of unemployed Canadian National dining-car waiters, who claim that West Indians from Demerara have been awarded Canadian National steamships jobs for which they applied.

Tom Moore, national president of the Labor Council, has been asked to petition the government, and developments in the situation yesterday presaged a clash between the Canadian labor law and the British Merchant Shipping Act.

The waiters, many of whom have families in Halifax, applied for jobs on the liner Prince Henry, which began a weekly service between Boston and Bermuda on Saturday.

They were willing, they said, to accept the regular remuneration of from $14 to $50 per month. Instead, these jobs were given to West Indians, and the Canadians were offered places, under the West Indians, at $14 per month. On a contract for three months they would receive $42, out of which they were expected to buy two uniforms costing more than $11 each, leaving about $19 for the summer's work.

In addition, the waiters said, they were to be barred from the dining-rooms and thus would not receive tips.

Officers of the Trades and Labor Council visited the local Department of Labor and secured copies of an order-in-council prohibiting the importation of labor which displaced Canadians. This they carried to immigration officials, who said they were powerless because the West Indians had been signed on at Demerara.

It was learned that eighty West Indians had been awarded jobs, but the immigration officials said the papers were in order according to the British Merchant Shipping Act, and that the men had been merely transferred from one liner to another in Halifax.

SELL VESSEL FOR $22,000

Montreal, July 20.—The steamship Canadian Commander, now lying in Halifax Harbor, has been sold to an Italian syndicate, Andrew Allan, general manager of Canadian National Steamships, announced yesterday. This is the first Canadian National steamship to be sold in accordance with the decision of the directors to reduce the fleet. The sale was stated to be approximately $22,000.

SAILING SHIP NOW IN ARCTIC

Seattle, July 20.—After being delayed by unfavorable winds, the sailing schooner C. S. Holmes arrived at Kotzebue in the Arctic from Seattle Sunday, according to word received from Capt. John Backland, her master. The vessel left Seattle May 19 laden with trading supplies and other cargo. The message from the Holmes, which was received by Captain Backland's mother, said: "Arrived after slow voyage. Discharging. All well. Flying to Kiana."

The C. S. Holmes is on her way to Point Barrow via Wainwright and other settlements on the shores of the Arctic. Kiana, where Captain Backland said he was going by airplane, is at the confluence of the Kobuk and Squire rivers and is east of Kotzebue. The object of the airplane trip was not given in Captain Backland's message but it probably was in connection with his trading operations, Mrs. Backland said.

The figures for height serve to distinguish high water from low water. Where blanks occur in the tables the tide rises or fall continuously during three of the usual tidal periods.

FURNESS HEAD IS NOW BARON

Word has been received from England that Sir Frederick Lewis, chairman of the Furness, Withy Company, who was made a baronet in the King's Birthday honors list on June 3, had taken as his title Baron Essendon of Essendon, in the County of Hertford. Sir Frederick joined the Furness, Withy Company at the age of thirteen years, and by his persistence, wisdom foresight and strong personality, progressed to the chairmanship of the Furness, Withy and allied lines. The baronetcy was conferred on Sir Frederick because of his valuable assistance to the government for many years, especially for his work on the Coal Selling Committee, Channel Tunnel Committee, Public Utilities Advisory Committee. The new baron has just been appointed to the chairmanship of the Royal Mail No. 1 company, which operated in the South American trade.

Kenneth Stoker has been appointed managing director of the Manchester Lines succeeding F. E. Vaughan, who died some weeks ago. Mr Stoker is a son of the late R. B. Stoker one of the founders and for many years managing director of the line.

PEARL BUCK ON HOLIDAY

Well-known Authoress Here Yesterday Aboard Ss. Empress of Japan

Though her two best sellers, "East Wind, West Wind" and "The Good Earth" have made her one of the world's outstanding literary characters of the day, Pearl Buck is still willing to keep in the background and let her husband, Prof. J. L. Buck of Nankin University, China, occupy the limelight.

Newspapermen who boarded the Canadian Pacific liner Empress of Japan here yesterday as she docked with a list of prominent passengers from Honolulu and the Far East almost overlooked the quietly dressed little wife and mother.

While her husband was being questioned as to affairs in China, Mrs. Buck, the wife and mother, quietly was superintending the packing and clearing through the customs of suitcases, trunks and handbags, and when the newspapermen wanted to talk to Pearl Buck, the successful authoress, she had very little to say.

"We're coming to America for a vacation," she explained, and wouldn't admit that the opening of Owen Davis's play of "The Good Earth" in New York in October had anything to do with it. "Yes, I always wanted to write," she admitted, "but when I wrote "The Good Earth" I didn't realise that I had achieved a best seller. The way people have welcomed it and "East Wind, West Wind" has been overwhelming."

TO MATCH TACK FOR CANADA CU

Cup First Won By Toron Club in Year 1896

Canadian Press

Rochester, N.Y., July 20.—Efforts the Royal Canadian Yacht Club lift the Canada Cup, historic trop of international fresh water saili will be renewed this year at Summ ville on Lake Ontario. The Roches Yacht Club will defend the thirty-s year-old piece of plate between Aug 1 and 8.

The cup was first won by the T ronto club in 1896, when the ya Canada was first across the line off T ledo. The winning club sought to p petuate the rivalry by making the c a challenge affair, and three years la the Genesee captured the silver Chicago.

In 1901 the Invader took it back the Royal Canadian after a victory o the Chicago craft Cadillac. Then 1903 the Rochested club returned to United States shores.

Three successive Canadian effo were unsuccessful. In 1905 the Tem aire lost to the Iroquois; in 1907 t Senecs turned back the Adele of T ronto, and after a lapse of twent three years the Thisbe, in 1930, stav off the challenge of Norman Good ham's Quest.

Royal Canadian's hopes this y appear to rest principally on Invac II, namesake of the last Canadian cr to lift the trophy. She is a Fyfe bo built in England. Besides, there Quest, Vision and Norseman, the la ter designed by W. R. Roue, who co ceived the Bluenose, unbeaten fishe man's champion of the North Atlant

Rochester has two boats, the Thisb successful two years ago, and the Con wago. The Thisbe, sailed by Willia P. Barrows, of Rochester, appears be the United States' best bet. La year she won the King Alfonso C in salt water and several lesser tr phies.

As in 1930, the cup races will be tw boat competitions, with internation rule, eight-metre craft in the race.

The rules provide that three of t five races must be won by the bo which claims the trophy. The Rac will be sailed off Summerville dail and after the close, the Lakes Yac Racing Association will begin its a nual Freemen Cup race from Summe ville to Cobourg, Ont. All classes canvas carriers and power boats yacht clubs on the great lakes will b entered.
